BIG LIFT followed big drop by car into building excavation at Cadboro Bay and Eastdowne early today. Oak Bay police said auto containing driver Malcolm Berge, 19, and passengers Murray Acton, 19, and Brian Whitehead, 21, was east on Cadboro when it hit utility pole, rammed through plywood fencing and plunged into foundation. Whitehead was treated for a head cut while other occupants escaped injury. Police said they were lucky — car was pierced by steel reinforcing rods which also punctured gas tank.

Women's draft means battle for Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today asked Congress to approve the mandatory military registration of American women and men aged 19 and 20 this year. Eighteen-year-olds would have to register beginning in 1981.

A bitter fight is expected in the House and Senate over the unprecedented U.S. registration of females even though Carter stipulated today that women must continue to be barred from combat.

About 8 million young people would be affected this year and another 4 million in the younger age group next year.

Carter asked Congress for $20 million to crank up the Selective Service System as part of a military buildup sparked by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He has stressed that he has not immediate intention of actually reinstating the draft.

"There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance, that would allow me to exclude women from an obligation to register," Carter said.

He added he had "no intention" of changing the policy that now keeps women from being assigned to units where they would be engaged in combat.

The postal registration proposal stipulates that all eligible Americans who are 18 now and turn 19 sometime during the year would have to register this year. Those who turn 18 this year would have to register when they turn 19 next year.

Carter's action on the draft came as U.S. intelligence reported the Soviet Union has begun army movements on its border with northwestern Iran.

The significance of the movements is not clear, but U.S. policymakers are concerned about them, fearing possible military pressure on Iran or even an attack. Iran is within the Persian Gulf area that Carter on Jan. 23 told Congress is vital to U.S. interests. He said those interests will be defended "by any means necessary, including military force."

Asked today about the intelligence reports, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said, "Soviet units stationed along the northwest border of Iran are engaged in high levels of activity."

Campbell guilty

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, former president of the National Hockey League, and businessman Gordon Brown were found guilty today of conspiracy to commit bribery in the Sky Shops affair.

Mackays have eye on summer trip

Puzzle winners a second time

Who says lightning doesn't strike twice?

Not Larry and Lillian MacKay of 2703 Cedar Hill Road — winners for the second time in the popular Times' Prevue Payoff Puzzle.

The MacKays, who collected a cool $1,100 in their first win back in December, 1978, this time share a $900 jackpot with Doug Orchard of 535 Strathdee Place in Colwood.

"You're kidding," said a delighted MacKay when told he and his wife had won again.

"That's great news — thanks a million!"

The Mackays say they're hoping to take a summer trip and their $450 windfall — the result of a team approach to the puzzle — will come in mighty handy.

Orchard, who is a devotee of the puzzle since way back, according to his wife, has often come close in the past with only one or two wrong answers

Mrs. Orchard said her husband, who was out of town working when the family got the good news, sends in one entry for every puzzle.

Any plans for the money?

"It'll go to pay bills," cracks Mrs. Orchard.

(The solution to last week's puzzle appears today on page 16. Prize for today's puzzle returns to $50).

U.K. riot over abortion

LONDON (AP) — Police battled thousands of protesting women outside the House of Commons today as MPs inside Parliament argued over tightening Britain's 13-year-old liberal abortion laws.

Police summoned reinforcements and forced a path through the demonstrators. Hundreds of women tried to block traffic outside the building.

A doorman was bitten on the hand as parliamentary officials evicted from the public gallery a group of young women who unfurled a banner declaring: "Women will not obey your bill," and interrupted the emotion-charged debate with shouts of: "A woman's right to choose."

A battle erupted when demonstrators who had gathered outside the nearby City Hall marched on Parliament when news of the evictions spread.

Women with children in their arms were carried along in the rush as police formed a chain to stop the demonstrators. The demonstrators, led by feminist organizations, forced their way into the building. Three women were arrested inside the House, police reported. There were more arrests outside.

MPs, debating restrictions which doctors say could halve the number of legal abortions performed, watched from windows of the Commons as women waved their fists and shouted: "Not the church, not the state, we must decide our fate."

The bill would limit the criteria used to determine when abortion is allowed, and would cut the time limit for abortions to 20 weeks from 28.

Dragged by loco, she lives

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 17-year-old girl who was dragged 75 metres beneath the engine of a freight train in the southern part of the city has survived to tell the tale.

Sharon Marr of Winnipeg, in fair condition Thursday after suffering multiple fractures and internal injuries, was pinned beneath the undercarriage of a 200-ton engine for half an hour Wednesday night while fire and ambulance rescue crews worked to free her.

"They squeezed her out between the brake springs and the wheels," said a spokesman for the fire department rescue crew.

"She's damned lucky to be alive."

A spokesman for Canadian National Railways said the engine had to be rolled forward slightly to free one of the girl's feet caught under one of the wheels.

"If you know what I know it's a miracle," the railway employee said.

"There's no room for a person to go under that engine."

Police said the train conductor saw the girl on the track . But the train couldn't be stopped in time.

Firms deny lighter 'bomb'

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for the three largest manufacturers of disposable and butane lighters said Thursday the recent controversy over their safety is exaggerated.

However, Elizabeth Nielsen, a spokesman for the federal consumer affairs department product safety branch, said regulations governing safety performance standards will come into effect in November and should eliminate problems with malfunctioning lighters.

She said lighters should not be taken into areas exposed to high temperatures or where welding is done or hot metals are used.

The manufacturers' spokesmen were commenting on reports that Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. in Kitimat has banned employees from having such lighters while in the smelter.

Stuart Saunders, manager of corporate and public relations with Gillette in Boston, said many reports of accidents caused by lighters are hoaxes.

"I have a file a foot thick, and nowhere in there is there anything to say an accident has actually taken place."

Saunders said that last month the occupational safety and health administration of the U.S. labor department retracted a memorandum it issued last May after an investigation showed two alleged lighter accidents involving welders with the Union Pacific Railroad never actually happened.

Allan Scott, spokesman for Bic, which sells 30 million disposable lighters in Canada each year, said the company has settled seven consumer complaints in four years. None of those were for lighters that exploded.

Cabbie slugged

A cab driver slugged and robbed early today is in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital with a broken nose and cheekbone.

Driver Claus Hellmodt, 56, of Victoria Taxi, was robbed of $80-$100 when jumped about 6 a.m.

Police said Hellmodt responded to a call to the 600-block Moss where a man was waiting.

Instead of getting into the car the man attacked and robbed him.

His assailant stole the cab and drove south. Police recovered it later at the Sir James Douglas schoolground.

We're off and kneeling on the big bloom binge

FLOWER POWER

Number of blooms counted until midday today:

120,866

They were off and running today, well, down on their knees and counting, as Victoria's fifth annual flower count started.

"We were surprised and delighted by the large total," project co-ordinator Carmela Costigan said.

"I had expected a slow start this year because the weather has not been co-operating. And my heart sank when it started to drizzle for awhile this morning.

"Now the weather outlook is good."

This morning's totals included daffodils, snowdrops, crocuses and heather.

"I checked Government House this morning and they have a large number of flowers. There are fewer than usual in Beacon Hill Park but I hear that Butchart's has plenty, probably a million."

Special teams will count at Butchart's, Beacon Hill Park, University of Victoria and other large areas.

Daffodils were sent this morning to Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving with the request that he ask his staff to count the blooms. Daffodils also went out to all local mayors, to Tourism Minister Pat Jordan and local newspapers and TV and radio stations.

Residents are being asked to count only those flowers blooming outdoors on their own property. The flower count line is 381-5315 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Leaders' energy slips fuel for quips

Times News Services

A "slip of the tongue" by Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau who indicated oil prices would rise by less than $3 a barrel this year if his party wins the Feb. 18 election had his officials scrambling and Prime Minister Clark laughing Thursday.

But it was the Liberals' turn to chuckle today when, during his weekly press conference, Clark today came up with something that sounded like "gasoline rationing if necessary but not necessarily gasoline rationing."

Trudeau's statement in a television interview caused a stir because the former prime minister has refused repeatedly during the campaign to say precisely how much oil prices would rise under a Liberal government. He has, however, pledged to keep it below the $4 increase proposed by the Progressive Conservatives.

His statement was at first denied by disbelieving aides during a campaign stop in Prince George. But they checked the tape of the interview and consulted Trudeau before announcing it was a slip of the tongue.

The aides said the former prime minister was referring to the $3 that is left of the $4 Tory proposal following the $1 increase imposed Jan. 1.

Clark quickly picked up on the mini-controversy, fuelled by varying statements of senior Liberals elsewhere on what the price would be if they win the election.

The prime minister contrasted Trudeau's "slip" with statements by Liberal energy critic Marc Lalonde, who stuck by the less-than-$4 figure during a speech in Saskatoon; former Liberal finance minister Jean Chretien, who said in Winnipeg the increase likely will be $3 to $3.50, and John Reid, former federal-provincial relations minister, who said last week the price would go up by at least $4.

At a election rally in Thunder Bay, he used the conflict to mock the Liberal "team approach."

Confusion in the Liberal ranks about oil pricing illustrates they can't even "explain it to themselves," let alone to other Canadians, Clark said.

Clark said it seemed the Liberals had four official spokesmen contradicting each other on energy pricing.

When the topic of energy was raised at the prime minister's weekly press conference held in Winnipeg today, the question of gasoline rationing proved a bit of a hot one.

Clark, who for weeks was been warning Canadians the Trudeau Liberals would bring in gas rationing if returned to office Feb. 18, ack-

Iran power shift sparks hope

Times News Services

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr secured strong new powers today and there were growing indications he would use them to move for the release of 50 American hostages now in their 97th day of captivity.

He promptly took another slap at the hostages' militant Moslem captors, declaring Islam was not superior to Christianity or Judaism and appealing for "civilized values." He also received pledges of support from the Iranian air force.

Bani-Sadr's growing consolidation of power within a week of being sworn into office has resulted in a gradual erosion in the position of the militants and raised hopes at the United Nations and in Washington a settlement to free the Americans may be near.

An official statement said Bani-Sadr was appointed head of the Revolutionary Council Thursday night, "with the consent of the Imam (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini)."

He will have full executive powers over the Revolutionary Council and government ministers "to harmonize proceedings," Tehran radio quoted council spokesman Hasan Habibi as saying — apparently a fiat to run the country under the guidance of Khomeini.

Previously the Western-educated Bani-Sadr was only acting head of the council with no power over its ministers.

In Washington, meanwhile, a subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives unanimously approved legislation authorizing the striking of a gold medal honoring Kenneth Taylor, the Canadian ambassador who helped spirit six Americans from Iran.

The bill honoring Taylor will go directly to the House floor for a vote Monday.

Representative Daniel Akaka (Dem. Hawaii) told the subcommittee that Taylor should be honored because of his courage in hiding the six American diplomats after the U.S. Embassy in Iran was taken over by Iranian militants.

The House and Senate earlier approved resolutions praising Taylor and the Canadian government for helping the six to escape. The bill to strike a gold medal for the ambassador has 160 co-sponsors.

The bill also authorizes the striking of bronze duplicates of Taylor's gold medal. These duplicates will be sold to the public.

In other developments:

— The hostages were visited Friday and found to be in good condition by the ayatollah's son, Ahmand, and a Palestinian archbishop, Radio Tehran reported.

— At least two of the hostages were allowed to telephone home and one said she was "in great spirits and very cheerful."

— Five people, including a general, were executed by firing squad in Iran after an Islamic revolutionary tribunal found them guilty of offences ranging from killing innocent demonstrators to torture and rape, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

— New Zealand closed its embassy in Iran and all its diplomats were leaving the country following a break-in at the embassy chancery in which documents were stolen.

— The ayatollah left his hospital bed today to greet several hundred foreign guests invited to Iran to celebrate the first anniversary of the Islamic revolution. He appeared weak and spoke barely above a whisper.

The name game

KAMLOOPS - The very serious reporter from the very serious Toronto paper shook his head in consternation and said "have you ever heard a worse political speech than that in your life?"

Having lead a very long life full of a lot of very bad political speeches, I had to confess that it ranked right up there with the lousiest, true; but actually I had heard the man make worse.

This was after Pierre Trudeau stunned a $10-dollar-a-plate crowd of 930 Liberals with a listless word-fumbling speech that — if anyone else had made it — would have been ascribed to too much giggle juice.

Much of the embarrassment felt in the crowd and the amusement expressed on the press row was because Trudeau insisted on referring warmly to the Liberal candidate for Kamloops-Shuswap as "Mark" Bryson when the man's name is actually Mack.

It does not rank as one of the world's greatest errors, but the incident and whole speech illustrated once again two interesting things about Trudeau: His lack of stamina and his strange attitude toward names.

The flannel-tongued performance was actually a result of the insensitive B.C. organizers who made him sit through an interminable meal in a warehouse-like hall.

Throughout this tour, his packagers have had him make his speech before the meal, then either exit or sit among the matron-groupies to fulfill his touchie-feelie functions.

Pierre Trudeau is the man who exhausts easily. Despite the famed "body of a 25-year-old," the man who looks superb at 60 and swims and skies and canoes cannot go for long stretches.

He never could, perhaps due to the fact that all that cerebral electricity coursing through his brain cells drains his muscular body.

Although Joe Clark is possibly the most unathletic man that God in Her wisdom ever created, he has much more stamina than Trudeau, his nervous energy driving him forever onward. The other phenomenon is names. Pierre Trudeau, the celebrated intellect who in days will be Prime Minister of Canada once again, simply cannot remember names.

Perhaps, again, it has something to do with his thought processes, like the police whistle that only german shepards can hear, being so concerned with ethereal matters denied the rest of us that mere monikers do not register with him.

Perhaps, he simply doesn't care — like the Kennedys and the Royals who never carry money, content in the knowledge some shuffling courtier will always be handy when needed.

Journalist George Radwanski is his biographer. He, like his subject, is a graduate lawyer and Trudeau, who dislikes most reporters with some vigor, appreciated Radwanski's analytical mind and granted him endless hours of interviews on the way to the book, Trudeau, that became a best seller.

Several weeks later Radwanski stood up at an Ottawa press conference. "Yes, Jack?" said Trudeau, who then looked in puzzlement as reporters collapsed in laughter.

A long-time aide shrugged last week and said, "it was only last year that he got my name right".

One of the great campaign moments came several elections back when Trudeau, on a Toronto platform, waxed warmly about the candidate he thought so much of: "Danny Barson . . . uh, Banny Danson . . . r, uh . . . Barney Danson."

Trudeau once had a private meeting with Dennis McDermott, one of the best known figures in Canada as President of the Canadian Labor Congress. Trudeau got it in his head that his companion was named Terry, and solemnly called him that through the meeting.

A fuming McDermott, whose vanity is only slightly less than that of his companion, finally repeated to Trudeau a talk he once had with the legendary Walter Reuther in which Reuther, lecturing the young McDermott, said, "Dennis, you've got to remember this . . . Dennis, you shouldn't forget . . ."

Trudeau listened politely, then said, "that's a very interesting story, Terry."

During Trudeau's third campaign in 1974, his speech writers attempted to soften his intellectual reputation before a speech to a labor audience.

It was the time when Hank Aaron was approaching Babe Ruth's all-time home run record and it was suggested to Himself that he use the analogy with his three elections: You may have one strike on Hank Aaron and you may have two strikes on Hank Aaron, but he has to be given a chance at a third strike.

Trudeau: "Who's Hank Aaron?"

Well, er, you see, sir, he's a baseball player who's trying to break the home run record of Babe Ruth.

Who's Babe Ruth?

When the eyeballs stopped rolling, it was explained who Babe Ruth was and Trudeau caught the idea, okayed it and later stood before his blue-collared sports fans.

No one counts Hank Aaron out just because he has two stikes on him, he said, adding that Aaron, of course, was the man out to beat the record of the famous "Baby Ruth."

Another jail smashing spree

BURNABY (UPC) — A second furniture-smashing protest in as many nights at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Center ended after prison officials promised some changes in prison conditions.

A prison spokeswoman said the 121 prisoners, after smashing tables, benches, windows and a heating system in the building's west wing, bargained all night with officials about their grievances before returning to their cells Thursday morning. No charges will be laid, she said.

Tuesday night, prisoners in the south wing barricaded themselves in a recreation room for 12 hours until they were forced out by guards with water hoses.

"We're going to institute a disciplinary panel to replace the traditional warden's court (where the prison director alone decides the outcome) on a trial basis," the spokeswoman said.

"We've already set up a committee to look into getting more law books in the library and we're going to reschedule television viewing time and institute more game tournaments for the prisoners."

Prison staff also agreed to check medical procedures and the availability of special diets. Additional telephones were already on order and prisoners will "receive two clothing changes a week" instead of one.

Family visits with inmates' children will not, however, be increased from the one a month allowed now, the spokesman said. Regular visits from spouses alone or friends will be lengthened where possible.

The prison, known as the Oakalla jail, has also experienced a hunger strike by prisoners, the stabbing of a guard and numerous escapes during the past year.

In Victoria, meanwhile, Attorney-General Allan Williams said he would not order any changes to routines for female prisoners at the jail.

A report he released on conditions at the prison was apparently outdated immediately by the events there Wednesday and Thursday.

The report, ordered after female prisoners complained of sexual harrassment by guards, found that all but seven of 42 recommendations made by the 1978 Royal Commission on the Incarceration of Female Prisoners had been implemented at the prison.

Fraud trial ordered for Keetch

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cyril Lloyd Keetch, former Woodward's vice-president charged with fraud and dealing in secret commissions totalling $87,123, was committed for trial Thursday.

After five days of preliminary hearings, Provincial Court Judge Edmond Cronin committed Keetch for trial on five counts of accepting secret commissions and one of fraud.

Cronin discharged one count of accepting a secret commission of $20,600.

Keetch, of West Vancouver, former vice-president of food operations for Woodward's 20 branches in B.C. and Alberta, was charged last June after an investigation by the RCMP commercial crimes section acting on complaints by Woodward's of a kickback racket involving its suppliers.

Keetch resigned after RCMP searched his office.

Indians threaten suit to get sales tax back

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs will take the provincial government to court if sales taxes illegally collected from native Indians are not returned, says president George Manuel.

Manuel was responding Thursday to a statement by Attorney-General Allan Williams that government officials are trying to determine whether there is a legal obligation to repay the taxes.

Williams said the government will not appeal a court ruling that Indians living on reserves are exempt from paying provincial sales tax on electricity and gas.

Uranium opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada said Thursday his union is opposed to uranium exploration and mining in Canada. Gary Newell told the B.C. royal commission of inquiry into uranium mining that the uranium industry does not have any respect for the health and safety of its workers.

Baby-killer jailed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Isch of Vancouver was sentenced to 12 years in prison Thursday in British Columbia Supreme Court for killing an eight-month-old boy in June, 1978. Isch earlier pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his girlfriend's baby. The child died of a fractured skull.

Settlement made

VANCOUVER (CP) — An out-of-court settlement has been reached between a city police inspector and British Columbia Television. Inspector Vic Lake's lawyer, Cecil Branson, said later the settlement was for $20,000. The suit involved a news story in September, 1978, about the Penthouse Cabaret. Cabaret owner Joe Phillipone made statements about the city vice squad's investigation of his club during an off-camera interview with a BCTV reporter. Lake, who headed the vice squad at the time, indicated he was thinking of suing Phillipone. BCTV then aired an interview with Lake, and included Phillipone's comments. Lake filed a libel suit, naming Phillipone, BCTV reporter Alyn Edwards, announcer Tony Parsons and BCTV news director Cameron Bell.

Dancers begin fund drive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dancers with Pacific Ballet Theatre have begun a fund-raising program in an attempt to salvage part of their current performing season.

PBT, British Columbia's only professional ballet company, folded Tuesday, citing financial problems.

"If we could raise $10,000 we'd be out of the hole, at least until the end of March and the completion of the tour," said company administrator John Holland.

"That was the amount we requested from Canada Council for the current season. If they had come through, none of this would have happened."

When the company suspended operations, it was less than mid-way through a scheduled 75-performance season. The theatre is $8,000 in debt and stood to lose about $2,000 on a tour.

Fighting for fish

The federal Fisheries Act, it seems, is destined to become one of the most controversial pieces of Canadian environmental legislation. But the controversy will not be sparked by the fisheries department, the federal agency charged with enforcing the act.

Individuals, conservation groups, and even unions now realize that it is the toughest piece of environmental legislation in the country, although the power of the act extends only to waterways inhabited by fish.

Last fall, David Aldcroft, a member of the Fraser River Coalition, charged a Coquitlam landfill operator under the Fisheries Act with polluting the Fraser River. The charges were laid on behalf of the coalition. Interestingly enough, the landfill operation was licenced by the provincial government. The federal fisheries department apparently saw nothing wrong.

At the time, a senior justice department lawyer, Digby Kier said that as far as he knew this was the first time in Canada a private citizen had charged a company with polluting under the Fisheries Act. But Aldcroft isn't likely to keep that distinction for long.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, during its annual convention this week, decided "to take appropriate action under the Fisheries Act" against a logging company on the Queen Charlotte Islands and the provincial government, which licenced the logging.

The union believes the fisheries department neglected its duty last summer by not stopping logging on the steep slopes adjacent to a salmon stream called Riley Creek. Charges were laid against 16 loggers and the company, but the fisheries department later backed down after a deal was made with the province and Q.C. Timber. In December, several landslides occured in the Riley Creek area.

Rather than just sidestepping the federal fisheries department, the UFAWU also says it plans to charge the department for failing to prosecute the company.

George Hewison, union secretary-treasurer, said: "We shouldn't have to do this kind of thing, but I guess we must because no one else is taking this up in a serious way."

There is no way of telling how effective this method this will be in dealing with alleged polluters. And as yet there has been no clarification whether provincial or federal permits for certain developments supersede the Fisheries Act. But it is almost a certainty that if the UFAWU or Aldcroft have any measure of success in the courts, the Fisheries Act will become the foundation of the environmental movement on the west coast.

The consequences are far reaching when, for example, Alcan Aluminum's hydro-electric expansion plans in northwestern B.C. are considered. The fisheries department has already said that the river diversion proposed by the company would affect fish stocks in the Skeena and Fraser Valley watersheds. An agreement on a contruction permit made by government agencies and the company may not be enough for to prevent a few individuals from using the Fisheries Act to take the matter to court.

False economy

The Capital Regional Board appears to be practising false economy on a grand scale in its latest decisions concerning the Clover Point sewer outfall.

The board decided this week to proceed with a 3,500-foot outfall at Clover Point because it would cost only about half as much as the 6,400-foot outfall originally proposed and approved. Cost of the short outfall is estimated at about $4 million; that of the long one about $4.5 million more.

Saving the regional taxpayers $4 million or more is certainly worthwhile, but all the expert testimony appears to be that the region is in fact wasting that much money.

All the technical sewage experts express deep doubts that the outfall will work. Tests to date show that the outfall has to be at least 6,000 feet long to maintain a high quality of water along the shoreline.

The pollution control board may even suspend the regional district's permit to build the short outfall unless it is proved the pipe can be lengthened if the short one doesn't work well. Engineers say that to lengthen a 3,500-foot outfall after completion would be extremely difficult, if not impossible.

There's not much point in saving money if two or three times the amount will have to be spent later to rectify the error made by taking the cheap way out the first time.

Toughness eludes camera

"It isn't fair and it isn't true, but it's there. My cursing it won't make it go away. So I don't curse."
Joe Clark, during interview.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. — Most interviews consist of just one question. All the others are warm-ups, or are camouflage, or are "soapbox" questions which allow the politician to get off whatever is in his mind, and in return for which, by unspoken agreement, he answers the one question the reporter is really interested in.

The one question I wanted to ask Joe Clark was, "How does it feel to be losing an election just because you happen to look a bit funny on TV?"

Delicate question

It's impossible, of course, to ask such a question of a prime minister or indeed of anybody. So I sliced it into pieces and tucked it in among other questions.

Two bits of background before proceeding.

First, in case anyone doubts the central importance of the way things happen to look on TV to the way we perceive reality, the circumstances of this interview provided a classic demonstration of the connection. It took place aboard Clark's Air Canada charter as the plane was returning to Charlottetown because of, as we learned later, a phoned-in bomb threat.

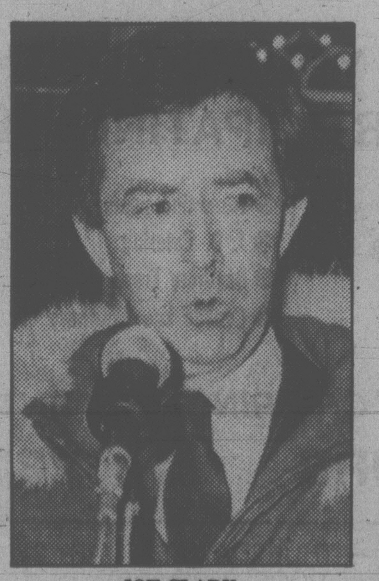
The instant the plane landed, reporters rushed to the terminal to phone in their stories. An hour later, while the plane still was being checked out, we all clustered around a small TV set — no doubt the night watchman's — to watch being played back to us on the TV news the event in which we'd all taken part. "It was too short," one reporter complained about the news item about the bomb threat. Another reporter silenced him with the crack, "now you know what it feels like." We had joined you in vacuum land.

As well, from the interviewer's start, Clark knew perfectly well the one question I really wanted to ask. Perhaps Clark's least-recognized quality, his inner tensile strength, is his ability to accept reality, pleasant or unpleasant, lucky or unlucky, and so to waste neither time nor emotional energy on might-have-beens.

Only once, in his replies, did Clark allow himself the luxury of a trace of bitterness. "I recognize," he said, "that even if my performance in all other respects should be quite exceptional, it (the TV image) will always be there."

Having expected the question, Clark had prepared for it. At first, he denied its importance — to himself. "You must understand that I get to hear fewer Clark jokes than other people and so am less aware of them, less bothered by them that is, than others may be."

Later, he denied the question's premise — that he was losing, whether because of the way he looks on TV, or for any other reason. Clark cast his denial as a parable.



JOE CLARK
. . . the polls are wrong

The most embarrassing moment in the history of the High River Times, it turns out, was the time that Charlie Clark, grandfather to the present and perhaps future Prime Minister, printed a premature obituary of Long Tom.

Long Tom, his last name unknown and his age undeterminate, ran the Chinese restaurant in nearby Longview. A visitor to High River from that hamlet reported Long Tom's death to Charles Clark who hurried into print a fulsome obituary of Long Tom's multiple good deeds and unblemished life.

A few days later, Long Tom came into the office of the High River Times, banged on the desk and demanded to see the editor. "I enjoyed reading all the good things you wrote about me," he told Clark, "but it sure isn't doing my business any good." Thereafter, Long Tom lived on for many more years, and his business thrived.

Clark knows perfectly well that today's obituaries — the polls — do his business no good. Since he can't change them, he ignores them. "They may affect us in Quebec where our supporters need a sense of momentum. But they are having no affect elsewhere because our workers know, as I know, that the polls are just wrong, that people are coming over to us."

Clark also knows that his TV image does his business no good. Since he can't change it, he ignores it. "It's not in me to make an emotional connection with the public in the way Pierre Trudeau once did, or John Diefenbaker once did. People look for other qualities in me, and they are finding them there."

Clark's core quality, which yet may connect him to the public, is his self-detached toughness.

Another person

You watch him, night after night, plugging away at his rallies, his performance smoother than before but still self-conscious and awkward, and you know and he knows that it's those aspects of him which will project through the eye of the TV camera.

Afterwards, in one-on-one interviews or when Clark strolls to the back of the plane to josh with reporters, you marvel at how he's quite another person, composed, relaxed, in command of himself and of his ideas.

There is one political equivalent to Long Tom. Harry Truman's happiest moment was reading, the day after he'd won the re-election as President in 1948, his political obituaries that had been printed the night before.

You wonder whether at the last moment, in the ballot boxes even, the public will recognize the similarities in the qualities of Clark and Truman. But then you remember that Truman did it before TV, and you wonder again.

Helping children

It has recently been my privilege to become acquainted with a very striking example of co-operation between parents and teachers to meet a special educational need in Greater Vancouver.

The need for co-operation grew from the fact that there were numerous children in the schools who had experienced severe difficulties in learning to read, write and spell, and for whom the schools had not been successful in providing a remedy. A group of interested parents, doctors, psychologists and teachers organized a branch of the Orton Society, a society based in the United States which is described in the literature as "a non-profit scientific and educational organization for the study and treatment of children with specific language disability" — often referred to as "dyslexia".

The new branch of the society immediately set to work to try to offer a special service, through the schools, for children with this need. They began by asking the medical clinic operated by Dr. Carl Kline, psychiatrist, to accept for assessment any children referred. Referrals could be made by either parents or the school authorities. At the same time a call went out for parents to volunteer to take training as tutors in what is called the "Orton-Gillingham" technique of specialized instruction for children with specific language disability. Parents volunteered and the Kline Clinic provided the initial training. The school system in the area agreed to allow trained parent volunteers to use designated space in each school for the tutoring of any referred and properly diagnosed children, on a one-to-one basis.

The technique provides intensive and quite specialized instruction and training which is beyond the capacity of schools, normally, to offer.

This program has been in operation for a number of years. Relations between tutors and teachers, between tutors and children, are excellent. I am advised that the program has achieved considerable success and that the demand for volunteer parent-tutors has increased from year to year. High school students and adults, as well as elementary school and primary level children, can often be treated successfully.

A program like this might interest many in the Victoria area.

A conference and workshop relative to the Vancouver program is being held at Langara College in Vancouver on Saturday, March 15. I can supply more information to anyone interested. — A.F. Deverell, Victoria.

Don't vote

Dan Turner's despatch from Toronto citing views of some Torontonians on the present series of televison ads must surely find a sympathetic ear in many of us.

Nightly we are being sickened and outraged by this vitriolic verbal abuse on the leaders of our political parties, which tells us nothing of a constructive nature concerning the real and the very vital issues of this unnecessary, unwanted, unthrifty, and unethical election. All of us, of whatever political persuasion, must feel saddened at the depths to which politics have sunk. These nightly natterings are an insult to all Canadians, an affront to our dignity and intelligence.

What a beautiful reprisal it would be if every man jack of us could manifest our collective disgust across the nation by refusing to vote at all. — Brenda Goode, 4690 Cordova Bay Road.

Overskate

There has to be more to it than meets the eye. Janet Morrissey and Heather Kemkaren are angry because they have been overlooked in the selection of Canada's entry to the world championships at Dortmund, Germany. Their anger appears to be well founded. These two young ladies came first and second in the Canadian National women's skating championships a couple of weeks ago and yet the Canadian Figure Skating Association picked third place winner Tracey Wainman, 12, to represent Canada.

Pray tell, what bearing does the fact that Miss Wainman has outstanding potential for the 1984 Olympics got to do with for 1980? On the face of it there appears to be bias on the part of the selection committee, but if there isn't, then a better explanation should be forth coming from the Figure Skating Association to alleviate any possible concern that budding figure skaters may have concerning their chances for a position on any future Canadia Olympic team. Fair play should be the name of the game. — R. Warren George, 3906 Scolton Road.

Underachievers

Forget the litany of broken Tory promises. Let's examine the record.

The mortgage tax plan will help a minority only. Thirty-nine per cent of the population are renters, and 46 per cent of homeowners have no mortgages. Any scheme which would take federal tax dollars and redistribute them to those who for the most part are better off financially to help them with the purchase of a home, is unconscienable. This money could be used to reduce the deficit that Mr. Crosbie is allegedly worried about.

The 18 per cent increase in the excise tax on gasoline is punitive. The reasons given are also suspect, particularly when we are told some of it will be refunded. Why take that much at the outset?

The local Tory candidates have obviously failed to make a case for this area in the way of rental housing. The proposed budget should have included a continuation of the capital cost write-off for this type of housing, both for here and in other problem areas.

Lack of action by the Tories early will now result in the fact that you and I will be paying more federal income tax for 1979 than we did for the same income in 1978. This is hard on those with fixed incomes.

Not resolved yet, and despite advice to the contrary, the 20-inch fish size limit is still is on the books ready to be implemented if the government is returned.

In summary, the Tories have been and continue to be under-achievers. Perhaps we should follow the precept of their own fisheries minister and throw those who do not measure up back.

Remember money which previously was not available for such things as the local airport, improvements to the search and rescue operations and numerous other projects is now magically in the final stages of an election going to be available. — H. Shergold, 1102-360 Douglas Street.

For punishment

Approximately 80 per cent to 85 per cent of Canadians are in favor of bringing back capital punishment for those undesirables who have been proven guilty beyond any reasonable doubt, of wilfully and premeditatedly committing the act of murder. I am not ashamed to admit I am one of that large group of pro-capital punishment citizens.

The anti-capital punishment people will say vehemently that the death penalty is cruel and unusual, and does not deter human beings from murdering.

Do the anti-capital punishment people ever think of the cruel and unusual methods which murders use to satisfy their homicidal whims? Shooting, stabbing, strangling, bludgeoning, burning, bombing, torturing, chainsawing, you name it. And secondly, capital punishment is meant to be a punishment, not a deterrence. What is the sense of telling murderers they should be deterred after they have done their repulsive deed? — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Good leaders

There were few times under the previous Liberal government that I felt proud to be a Canadian in terms of the international scene. Mr. Trudeau often left Canadian protests in the hands of private citizens while he danced behind the Queen's back at Commonwealth Conferences.

But now at long last we have a Prime Minister and a Minister of External Affairs who are not afraid to stand up and be counted in the face of world crises. It's good to see our government lending support to our American neighbors upon whom we depend so much. I agree with Mr. Clark's stand on the Olympic boycott and his utter condemnation of the Iranian hostage issue. We need strong leadership in these times, and Mr. Clark and his government seem determined to provide it. — Reed H. Elley, 1730 Carrick Street.

Shame

The obscene picture on your front page of January 24 proves that we have among us people who will go to any lengths for material gain. Rather than look so proud, Kmarjit Gupta should hang his head in shame for his contribution towards the possible extinction of noble animals. The destruction of habitat is hazardous enough for wild game without the added peril of insensitive humans toting high-powered rifles. — G. Anthonisen, 3925 Winton Street.

The challenge of the 1980s

More growth, but not at the cost of quality

By Barbara McLintock and Leslie Yates

Boating could become a rich man's hobby

Many Canadians, in particular those who live in this part of B.C., view southern Vancouver Island as the California of Canada — only better. Better because it is a California that has managed to preserve much of its natural beauty, a California that hasn't succumbed to the problems brought on by a large population and sprawling urban centre.

Yet those urban pressures are mounting and will continue to mount through the 1980s. The question facing politicians, planners and residents in the next 10 years is how to grow but at the same time protect what is broadly thought of as the quality of life.

It's no small task. In the eyes of some, any sacrifice of farmland to housing leads to degradation of the environment. For others, such change leads to an enhancement of their quality of life.

Municipal politicans and business leaders generally agree that growth coupled with preservation and enhancement is the key.

But there is less agreement on how the words are to be translated into reality. Meanwhile, whether welcomed, resisted or ignored, Victoria's natural advantages will continue to attract more visitors, settlers and problems.

The biggest drawing card to southern Vancouver Island is climate, particularly for the retired. Climate, however, isn't the only reason for a healthy, happy environment. Others include access to natural attributes, education, medical facilities, housing and the arts. Over the next decade these factors will be affected by a combination of steady, if limited, growth, tight control of government purse strings and the emerging strength of organized citizen groups.

Victorians' love affair with the outdoors is perhaps no better illustrated than by the numbers involved in boating. Surrounded by some of the best saltwater fishing and sheltered cruising grounds to be found in North America, the number of boaters is steadily increasing.

In 1973 more than 17 per cent of the 73,447 households in the Greater Victoria area owned boats. That amounted to nearly 12,500 privately-owned vessels. Since then the number of households has increased to 81,000 and is expected to grow at about 1.5 per cent a year. Even without an increase in the percentage of boat-owning households, the number of privately owned boats is probably 14,000.

Those might seem like dull statistics, unless you happen to be in the marina business or are a boat owner looking for a place to dock your weekend escape machine.

Not everybody needs marina facilities. By far the largest number of boat owners use trailers for storing, transporting and launching. However, a study prepared for Oak Bay Marina in 1975 showed that 34 per cent of boat owners required marina space. At that time about 4,300 spaces were available at 35 private marinas and government wharfs within a 20-mile radius of the city centre. There was no surplus, even though the number of berths had increased 150 per cent in the previous nine years.

The shortage of moorage space hasn't changed. Those who include boating and moorage space as an integral part of their quality of life may find increasing frustrations.

Bob Wright owns Oak Bay Marina, the largest in the region with 500 berths. He says unless some waterfront residents and local governments change their attitudes to allow more marinas, boating will revert to a rich man's pastime.

In the past five years, his expansion plans on the Saanich Peninsula have been thwarted by what he calls an "I'm all right, Jack" attitude of community groups. He's not alone. Even hints by Saanich municipality about a new marina at Cordova Bay are leading to stiff opposition from area residents worried about a degradation of their neighborhood.

"There are three big things here," says Wright, who is also a city alderman. "The natural beauty, the climate, and fine cruising and fishing in the Gulf Islands and San Juan Islands: yet politicans look at marinas as more of an evil."

Some argue that the increasing costs of energy, both to produce and power boats, will see them go the way of the eight-cylinder car. The demand for moorage will then decrease. But gazing over the masts of hundreds of sailboats docked in the marina, Wright says that in 1962 there were two sailboats in Oak Bay. Now there are about 250. "Boaters are changing with the times."

Wright says that unless more moorage space is available, apartment dwellers who don't have the space to store trailered boats will be denied access to Victoria's greatest natural asset.

He admits the berthage shortage isn't hurting the marinas financially. With the demand so high, moorage spaces have become almost as valuable as the boats themselves. He says if municipal politicans don't loosen up and take undeveloped bays to encourage planned marinas, the land will be broken up, sold in small parcels, and the opportunity will be lost for all time.

It's unlikely that a shortage of berthage will deter the angling addict. The lure of year-round salmon fishing from Sooke right around the Saanich Peninsula to Brentwood Bay makes the inconvenience of trailering, car-topping, or even rafting up with fishboats at government wharves worth the effort.

Salmon returning to B.C.'s major salmon spawning ground — the Fraser River — and hundreds of other rivers on eastern Vancouver Island and the mainland, pass through the Strait of Juan de Fuca. And the fishermen know it. The B.C. environment ministry estimates that about 25 per cent of Greater Victoria's population participates in saltwater angling, adding more than $20 million to the local economy.

In the next decade, the major obstacle for longtime saltwater fishermen will be competition, as more residents try their luck. If local tourist organizers are able to promote further winter fishing, there will be more lines and lures looking for that four-salmon limit. It is estimated that in 1978 more than 10,000 visitors tested their angling skill in the saltchuck around Victoria.

Although moorage space may be a problem for the boater, seating space is not a problem for those Victorians interested in cultural stimulation. The cultural arts grew enormously in the last 10 years, but there may not be the patrons or the sustained interest from government funding sources to produce much expansion.

Allan Purdy has been involved with the local arts scene for over 15 years both as a performer and organizer. He is currently chairman of the cultural funds advisory committee which last year distributed some $187,000 from local municipalities to various arts groups.

Purdy sees one of two scenarios unfolding over the next few years — either a retrenchment with an emphasis on quality, or a conscious effort on the part of community leaders to promote Victoria as an arts centre of the Pacific.

"We've reached a plateau. We either say to the arts community that it's time to stabilize your economic situation, or go for broke and inject large sums of money to create an international atmosphere."

Purdy says the growth of live theatre has been astronomical. Fifteen years ago there was one theatre and a few church groups. Now there are six established theatrical groups. The Victoria Symphony, he says, has survived, improved and now has received international acclaim.

But Purdy says most drama groups, music societies, art galleries and museums are operating in the red, though 75 per cent of their funding is from government sources.

The only two that have been able to achieve self-sustaining financing are the Victoria Art Gallery and the Conservatory of Music. "Because of pressure on the tax dollar, I see a period of cutbacks until the arts community shakes its stifling deficits."

But Purdy doesn't necessarily see the 1980s as a period that will adversely affect those who patronize the arts. "I hope that we start to improve the quality, rather than just churning out quantity."

One institution that has not only furthered the arts, but also the quality of life in general, is the University of Victoria. Aside from the obvious benefits to fulltime students, estimating just how much a university enriches any community is difficult.

Whether it is a government employee who jogs on the wooded trails that meander about the campus or a reporter who takes a history course part-time, their lives wouldn't be as rich without the university. UVic president Howard Petch says that for 10 years after moving to the present campus in 1965 the university was very inward looking. "Now there is a sense of confidence and it's outgoing. It's able to perform a real service for people."

Petch says the university's major function is to educate, but that it is able and willing to participate with and contribute to the community at large. In fact he is surprised that with so much going on, there aren't more people coming.

Petch, president of UVic for the past five years, says he is optimistic about its growing prominence. New buildings for the law faculty will soon be completed, moves are underway to add an engineering department, and with any kind of luck UVic will be able to break the Lower Mainland universities' monopoly on teaching business administration.

Petch says that as the university and its reputation grow, it is able to attract both prominent staff members and guest speakers, and this in turn attracts the public's interest. "You couldn't get a seat to hear a nobel laureate who spoke here recently. The lecture was free and open to the public."

Over the next 10 years Petch expects that UVic's curriculum and student population will continue to grow and so will opportunities for the public. The university already offers a vast range of both credit and non-credit part-time courses, strong school of music and theatre departments which give recitals and productions, the Maltwood museum which holds exhibitions monthly, and athletic facilities. A rhododendron garden is now being prepared which will have one of the finest collections in North America.

One major ongoing controversy related to quality of life is land use. The battle over the Minnie Mountain housing proposal has been a classic confrontation between resident and developer. Residents of Cadboro Bay felt the addition of some 200 housing units to their neighborhood was not only a visual blight, but something that would tax the tranquillity of the community. The development ended up in the B.C. Court of Appeal before construction could start.

Although most resident versus development skirmishes are settled out of court, there is no reason to believe the conflict will diminish over the next decade. If the regional district planners are correct, Greater Victoria will have a population of about 290,000 by 1996. Accommodation will have to found for 70,000 additional people over the next 16 years. At the same time the unique character of the region must be preserved if Victoria is to retain its major attraction for tourists and high technology industry.

People concerned with conservation usually end up in one of two camps: Those who believe their neighborhood is under attack and those who believe that farmland is being squandered. Both groups are vigorously criticized by a third camp which feels that many of these complaints are downright parochial. In fact, they say, the complainers are hampering the quality of life because no growth means a lack of jobs and affordable housing for the young. The community is less able to support social amenities such as good theatre and decent restaurants.

Hal Knight, a management consultant who heads the Saanich Greenbelt Association, lays the blame for the constant conflicts over land use on the shoulders of local governments and the Capital Regional District. He says there is a complete lack of integrated planning for the region. As a result he says non-agricultural areas are being left fallow while farmland and potential recreation areas are being eroded for housing. He notes that between 1971 and 1976 there was a 20 per cent loss of productive farmland around Greater Victoria.

"By planning for housing first and parks and agricultural areas second, we are losing a great opportunity, both for enhancement of the environment and the tourist industry," says Knight. "We've got the space, all we need is the imagination. A population target of 500,000 could be set and proper land use decisions made accordingly."

As for the future, he's not encouraged. Local councils don't seem to be planning for anything more than carving up their municipalities with roads and increasing their tax bases, he says. "Local politicians, it seems will only change their approach as the result of a crisis, and by then it may be too late."

How rising housing prices affect one's quality of life depend on whether you are a buyer or seller. According to Cedric Steele, chamber of commerce president and the owner of a local realty company, it's going to be a seller's market for at least the next five years.

Prices here, he says, are still below the Canadian average for cities. "To anyone moving here from the prairies house prices on the top of our market — say in the $125,000 to $175,000 range — appear to be a bargain. And he says because there is no end in sight to a shortage of rental accommodation, the houses on the lower end of the scale — in the $50,000 to $70,000 range — are a better alternative than very high rents."

Over the next 10 years, Steele predicts no dramatic changes in the housing market, other than a swing towards more basic, no-frill homes, and an increase in the number of high-density housing units in the downtown area.

He agrees that much of the conflict over land use could be overcome through diligent planning. "I can understand the no-growth or 'I'm alright Jack' point of view, but nobody is offering any alternatives."

Steele's point is echoed by a planner with the CRD. He says it is difficult to predict where future growth will take place because so much depends on political decisions. He expects continued pressure on the Saanich Peninsula municipalities for "in-fill" housing.

Shelter and services for Victoria's retired community will be an ongoing issue throughout the '80s. But although the elderly tend to be high consumers of publicly provided services, Pauline Barker, the manager of Silver Threads, doesn't see much change in the position of senior citizens. Inflation and the cost of living will still be the biggest hardships.

Greater Victoria's mild weather is the undisputed reason the number of people more than 65 make up a larger percentage of the population than any other major city in Canada. That figure will rise gradually through the next decade as Canada's population as a whole ages. Silver Threads, which provides counselling and recreation activities for some 5,000 retired people in Greater Victoria, estimates that about half the people who use the service are from other parts of Canada.

The grass IS greener

For those who may be thinking about greener pastures in other parts of Canada, here's a quick reminder. Victoria's annual rainfall is 657 millimeters a year. That's about 400 mm less than Vancouver and 135 less than Toronto.

And Victorians receive more hours of sunshine each year than any weather recording station on the east coast. They are blessed with an average of 2,183 hours annually — 130 more than Toronto and only 90 fewer than Regina.

Recent arrivals from the east are well aware of differences between Victoria winters and those of, say, Montreal. But in case a few locals have forgotten, Victoria's average winter temperature is 3 degrees. Montreal 'boasts' -9, to say nothing of Winnipeg's -19.

Barker says the young retired, new retirees and those who are likely to retire in the next few years are usually better able to deal with the future that those over 70, who retired some years ago.

"The young retired often don't have the same financial problems. Most have left companies with pension plans that are indexed to the cost of living, most are better educated and prepared for retirement. Many of the older retired never had the chance to build up a nest-egg."

As the retired population grows there will be increased pressure on the provincial government for improved medical and long-term care facilities. The elderly account for for twice as many hospital admissions as their proportion in the general population.

Although a shortage of beds in long-term care institutions now has put additional pressure on the hospitals, plans are afoot to add an additional 150 long-term care beds to the city's inventory.

Looking for spring's first harbinger

It's February, and time for me to start rushing spring.

Rushing spring — searching for signs of the season long before it is due — is an annual ritual with me. It isn't that I don't enjoy winter here on Canada's west coast, it's just that old habits die hard. And my "old habits" about spring come from my Prairie days, where folks start looking for signs of spring along about Thanksgiving Day.

It's hard to know just when I began rushing spring this year. It might have been the morning I first realized I wasn't waiting for my bus in the dark anymore. Or it could have been that day a couple of weeks ago when a Pelagic Cormorant went winging past Cattle Point sporting its nuptial dress of white flags on its flanks. Then again, it might have been the shenanigans of a group of Buffleheads on Esquimalt Lagoon, Buffleheads whose fancy, like the young man's in spring, had obviously turned to thoughts of . . .

Of course, it could have been the weather. With January's cold behind us, and warm February rains bringing life to the crocuses and daffodils, why not start thinking of spring?

But when I get right down to it, I don't think I'll credit any of these for putting thoughts of spring in my head this year. No, my first harbinger of spring — in 1980 — was a Golden-crowned Sparrow.

Normally you wouldn't expect Golden-crowned Sparrows around Victoria to be harbingers of anything. They arrive here late in October, hang around for most of the winter, then leave for their mountain summer homes in April. But the one I credit with bringing an early spring to my backyard during a brief sunny spell last Sunday did something undeniably spring-like — it sang.

It isn't too unusual for Golden-crowned Sparrows to do a little singing in winter but it's usually short snatches of — what seems to me anyway — self-conscious song. They just don't give out with the enthusiasm of April.

And that's what made the song of the Golden-crown so special last Sunday. It had all the rich, sweet tones of a Golden-crown that didn't care who heard him. He sang three or four choruses — each of three plaintive whistled notes, the second higher than the first, the last lower than the other two — then silence.

Those snatches of song also reminded me that I'd been taking the Golden-crowns for granted since coming back from my holidays early in January. I'd noted that they were still around, decided I hadn't lost any while I was away, but otherwise ignored them.

But that song brought them back to mind and, in the same burst of sunlight that had produced the song, I thought I saw a definite brightening of the colors around the heads of some of those in the yard.

For most of their stay here, Golden-crowned Sparrows belie their names — they're anything but golden crowned. Only on their leaving, late in April usually, do the rich black stripes on each side of their head, and the bright yellow patch between them, become noticeable enough to readily identify the birds. Between now and then, the change to brighter colors progresses slowly. On many — probably young of the year — the dull colors of winter hold on until well into March. On others — probably adults — the colors begin to show early. I guess those showing some color in my yard are adults.

But there's another sign of spring — at least to my way of thinking — among my Golden-crowns; they're not getting along. And not getting along, getting into little tiffs with your neighbor, is a sure sign of spring among birds that flock together in winter. It's a sign that things are changing inside the birds, that the social season is nearly over, and that decisions about mates and migration will soon have to be made.

Take a look at your Golden-crowns. If they aren't showing some of the signs I've been talking about, then maybe I am rushing the season.

UVic approves Mao award

University of Victoria senate Wednesday approved a scholastic award in the name of the late Chinese dictator Mao Tse-tung.

Approval came after reconsideration of the $100 annual prize by its student awards committee.

Objection had been raised earlier that the Mao prize might not serve the university's best interests in view of a large local Chinese population who may hold views contrary to the donor.

The award is the bequest of Bill Scott, a former resident of China and admirer of Mao's educational achievements. Scott lived in Victoria for more than 20 years, and died a year ago in Hawaii.

He lived much of his life in China prior to the Communist regime, and operated a pawn shop and rest home after coming here.

The Senate accepted the prize under the description: "Mao Tse-tung Memorial Award — funded by a bequest from the estate of Bill Scott," which complies with Scott's will.

The Senate made note of the fact the university is not sponsoring the prize, only administering it.

A third or fourth-year student with high standing in modern Chinese geography will be selected to receive the award, which is in addition to an unspecified travel grant, also from Scott's bequest, to be given from time to time to help students tour China.

The Senate also passed a resolution thanking the Victoria Conservatory of Music for its "distinguished association" with the university for the past 11 years, and pledging future co-operation.

The conservatory affiliated with UVic's music department June 18, 1968, and its formal connection will end Aug. 31 this year.

Recently, the conservatory moved into its first permanent quarters, the former St. Ann's Academy on Humboldt.

Kempf slammed

NDP members of the legislature's Crown Corporations Reporting Committee Wednesday demanded the resignation of committee chairman, Socred MLA Jack Kempf.

They criticized Kempf's decision to cancel committee meetings scheduled for Feb. 14 and 15, the second such cancellation in as many months.

"Mr. Kempf is making a farce of the committee's responsibility to review the operations of Crown corporations on an on-going basis.

"He is literally wasting the committee's $400,000 research budget and frustrating the legitimite desire of opposition committee members to perform their duties," the statement said.

The committee has held only one meeting since the May 10 provincial election.

Analysts noted that the market has been in the grip of a "natural resources" mania for several weeks.

Among oil stocks on the active list, Gulf Oil rose 2⅜ to $46⅞; Mobil 1⅛ to $63½; Texaco ½ to $39; Occidental Petroleum ⅛ to $30⅝, and Standard Oil of California 2 to $74¾.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose sharply in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday, in the face of a weakening U.S. market.

The short end of the market remained gained 50 cents. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues rose three points. Corporates were up two points.

Day-to-day money was available at 15 per cent.

Although investor activity had been minimal for then past two weeks, accounts began to enter the the market earlier this week placing pressure on dealer's short positions and causing an upward swing in prices, an anlalyst from Levesque, Beaubien Inc. said.

The U.S. market, however, remained under considerable pressure as participants became aware that that double digit inflation could become a more permanent fixture than had previously been considered, dealers said.

Southam

Southam Inc. had net earnings of $32.4 million or $2.61 a share in 1979, compared with $31 million or $2.49 a share the previous year.

The figures do not include extraordinary items of $7.2 million in 1979 and $2.2 million in 1978.

In the last three months of 1979, net earnings were $11.7 million, up 19.2 per cent from $9.8 million in the previous similar quarter.

An interim report to shareholders says the year's results mask an operating performance that had been satisfactory except for two special situations — intense and expensive competition faced by the Montreal Gazette before the death of the Montreal Star, and a prolonged strike at Pacific Press in Vancouver.

These two situations reduced per-share income by the equivalent of 70 cents, the report says.

Boeing

The Boeing Co. has reported sales for 1979 of $8.13 billion, net earnings of $505.4 million and declared a three-for-two stock split.

The 1979 figures were up from sales of $5.46 billion and net earnings of $322.9 million in 1978, the company said Monday.

The announcement said 1979 earnings were $7.88 a share, compared with $5.04 a share for 1978, adjusted for the 1979 three-for-two stock split.

The split will take the form of a stock dividend with one new share to be issued April 14 for every two shares held by stockholders of record March 14.

Genstar

Genstar Ltd. has reported its preliminary results for 1979 show net income increasing by 39 percent to $123.6 million or $4.21 per share compared to $81.6 million or $3.02 per common share in 1978.

Average common shares outstanding increased from 26,376,000 in 1978 to 27,274,000 in 1975.

Revenues for 1979 increased by 11 percent to reach a record $1,265 million from $1,143 million.

Falconbridge

Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. had net earnings of $110.5 million or $21.01 a share in 1979, compared with $5.8 million or 22 cents the previous year.

The company said in an interim report to shareholders that the earnings jump reflects a substantial increase in the average net selling price for metals and a higher nickel and copper sales volume.

Watched BCRIC pot boils slowly

By AB KENT

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. president David Helliwell came as close to revealing his investment strategy as he could without actually telling all to a Men's Canadian Club audience Thursday.

But he made it clear that forestry and petroleum resources rank ahead of mining and related service industries.

Helliwell admitted he is under shareholder pressure to reveal BCRIC investment plans, which are developing more slowly than directors anticipated.

"But prudence is required," he cautioned, adding the process of developing a long-range strategy must not be hurried.

Helliwell said all resource areas will be explored and measured against the yardstick of income potential, future accessibility, joint undertaking prospects and available expertise.

Expansion will come in forestry to create an ideal balance of holdings that will ensure future wood fibre supply, processing facilities and markets.

More oil property in B.C. and Alberta will be sought, he said, and future investment will be made in other parts of Canada as well as the U.S. and beyond.

The BCRIC's initial strategy involved only an $8 million investment for 1979 and $55 million for the five years to 1983, but with the heavy response to share offerings, it became possible to earmark $30 million for 1980 and more than $100 million later, Helliwell said.

"We now have the financial capability to do some very exciting things for our shareholders," he said.

Of the two million stockholders, a majority never previously held shares.

This presented an opportunity to open lines of communication and raise the image of business held by a skeptical public.

"We feel a special responsibility toward our shareholders," Helliwell said.

A toll-free telephone line since August has answered more than 26,000 inquiries about the corporation, and Helliwell said the intention is to keep the public involved in the business process.

The inaugural annual meeting in Vancouver March 27 will be telecast for live distribution on community cable systems all over the province.

If there are more shareholders than the Orpheum Theatre can hold, the date will be set over to April 7 at Pacific Coliseum.

BCRIC must show growth for risk-takers and for others, but ensure reasonable quality of life, Helliwell said.

By this he said he means making social responsibility part of BCRIC's hopes and perceptions.

Most corporations today recognize they have obligations to society as well as to shareholders. "The question is how far they should go."

But business must be awake to social demands and respond if it is to survive, he said.

That requires candidness and humility, the only ways to gain credibility.

In a question session, Helliwell was asked if funding research and development is among BCRIC's objectives.

"We've given quite a lot of thought to that. We've had a lot of better mousetrap ideas thrown at us," he said.

But it had been decided to channel such incentives — if adopted — into the extraction of natural resources.

He said the proposed distribution of Petrocan shares to Canadian citizens, copying the BCRIC format, is a good idea, except that the federal Progressive Conservative plan would force the directors to divide their policy-making responsibilities between corporation and government.

BCRIC is not government-controlled, since provincial shareholdings dropped from 20 per cent to 5 per cent with the public share distribution.

"The corporation is not here to fulfil government economic policy," he stressed, adding its responsibility is only to shareholders.

Another question related to Trident Aircraft, which closed when federal government support was withdrawn.

Helliwell said he got about a dozen letters and a number of telephone calls from people urging BCRIC to rescue Trident with new financing.

It was difficult to respond to the suggestion when a huge pool of investment money stands uncommitted but Helliwell also said he was scared off by the people who feel Trident is not a good investment risk.

Earlier there were about 20 calls seeking BCRIC funds to buy the Emily Carr collection of paintings offered by a Vancouver industrialist.

Helliwell said, however, if he acceded to such requests, come the annual meeting "a lot of shareholders would be after my scalp."

Helliwell said the corporation will be under constant scrutiny by the entire population.

"There is no way any management of BCRIC will be able to bury any mistake, as many corporations are able to do."

Chrysler loss U.S. record

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp., true to forecasts it presented to the government late last year, has set a record for U.S. corporations — a loss of $1.1 billion for 1979.

The struggling auto company, third largest in the nation, said Thursday it will try to hold losses next year to $500 million.

The news came as the nation's carmakers announced layoffs next week will exceed 210,000 industry-wide.

Production plans remain conservative and likely will remain so until there is a break in the sales slump.

Reports Thursday from U.S. automakers showed 174,000 blue-collar workers are on open-ended layoff and 39,925 more will be temporarily idled next week.

Struggling to pull together $2 billion in private funds to qualify for $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees, Chrysler executives held firm to their optimism about the company's long-term prospects.

The company's $1.1 billion loss compared with a deficit of $204.6 million in 1978.

In the fourth quarter of 1979, Chrysler pegged its losses at $375.8 million — less than some analysts had predicted. It said it expects to lose a similar amount in the first quarter of 1980.

In the similar period of 1978, Chrysler showed a profit of $43.2 million.

Chrysler's major hope remains in the line of fuel-efficient, front-wheel drive compacts it will introduce this fall.

Meanwhile, Ford Motor Co. Thursday revealed it plans to put its new, fuel-efficient, front-wheel drive "world car" on the U.S. market in 1981.

Loan rate decreased

LONDON, Ont. (UPC) — Canada Trust has announced it has cut its lending rate to 14.5 percent from about 16 percent for all loans in Ontario for the purchase of 1979 and 1980 cars up to March 1.

"With the government offer and our rate cut, consumers would wait a long time to beat this deal," said Bob Overholt, company assistant vice-president for loans services.

The Ontario government announced last week it would rebate up to $700 the sales tax paid for the purchase of 1979 new cars and light trucks by March 1.

Standing ovation to Menuhin legend

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is more than 50 years since Yehudi Menuhin experienced his first standing ovation. Such episodes have been a steady accompaiment to his career — and they're still happening.

Thursday's audience at University Centre was on its feet as the last notes of the Mendelssohn E minor Concerto died away, propelled more, surely, by enthusiasm for a legendary figure than by the quality of the playing.

To be honest we have heard the Mendelssohn — particularly the final movement — much better played by younger visiting artists of recent time. Still none has had the charisma; none wears the halo of genius so graciously. And no one has endowed the slow movement, the Andante, with more tenderness than Menuhin did.

It was there, and in certain brief passages of the first movement, that we were made aware of the intellect and the heart that once prevailed and created the legend.

The fabled tone, full clear and so focused that it shines easily through the thickest orchestral texture, was nevertheless still much in evidence.

Paul Freeman conducted the work with fine sensitivity; the tutti episodes were always well in balance, the soloist's phrasing and rubato minutely responded to by an alert orchestra.

A smiling Menuhin acknowlelged the audience's clamor for more with three encores. It was immediately apparent that he is at his happiest and best with Bach. The three movements revealed an authoritative style and brilliance that had been absent in much of the Mendelssohn. They were texturally rich, fluent, superb in phrasing and intense in vitality.

The first part of the program was supplied by the orchestra and its advances under Freeman were clearly demonstrated. The finely tuned acoustics of the University Centre Auditorium permitted the ear to appreciate the ensemble's improved tonality and balance.

Instrumentation had been reduced to what amounted to the symphony core players. This size was well suited to the Mozart overture to The Abduction from the Seraglio, and Schubert's charming incidental music to the ballet, Rosamunde.

Freeman provided both works with a lilting vitality and well proportioned dynamics. The Schubert was notable for its charmingly poetic treatment and graceful shaping.

From the works of a little known Bohemian composer, Jan Hugo Vorisek, a contemporary of Beethoven whose work represents a transition between Schubert and Beethoven, Freeman presented an attractive four-movement Sinfonia. It suited the orchestra well and was presented with considerable authority and much pleasing use of color.

Tricky tactics hooked Lucy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucille Ball likes to tell a story about how she ended up doing a 90-minute televison special she didn't particularly want to do. She calls it the "Tricky-Mickey Meeting" story, and it goes like this:

"Fred Silverman (NBC's president) asked me if I would come to NBC. I told him no, that I probably wouldn't leave CBS. But he came and took me to a Tricky-Mickey dinner, and then here (to her home) for a gabfest, and presented me with an interesting idea.

"He asked me if I'd like to search for a half-hour sitcom for NBC. I thought, gee, I wouldn't mind doing that, you know, producing. He asked me if I had any ideas.

"I said, 'ok, yes, I do.' I thought of Donald O'Connor, a marvellously talented man, the one performer who came to mind.

"Well, he took the half-hour idea and it suddenly became an hour-and-a-half, with me in it. I said to myself, 'Oh, hell, now they want me in it. I knew it wasn't going to be a simple as I thought.' It was a cute trick."

Lucy and her writers made the Tricky-Mickey meeting the central theme of tonight's special, Lucy Moves to NBC. Fred Silverman himself is in it.

Lucy admits that not being on the air, regularly after being Lucy on television for 20 years, was a black time for her.

She wants her arena back, but she'd like to redefine its dimensions. She still has a working production company and she'd like to work it for NBC.

"We'll see what they (NBC) do with the first project (the pilot in tonight's special). I refuse to go beyond that right now."

CLUES ACROSS:

6. DEPRAVED not deprived. there is little reason why a deprived man should be even outwardly happy (as distinct from "really" happy "inside"). Aptly, a DEPRAVED or corrupt man may get much of his own way without achieving true contentment.
8. MATTER not master. The master a butler serves is not just "a master" in an indefinite sense. Also, the clue's phrase "calling for his attention" is required more for MATTER.
10. SCRAPE not scraps. The clue's view of SCRAPE/scraps as being "trouble," and of a probably discreditable kind, suits a SCRAPE better. Boys may get into trouble for fighting, of course, but they are not necessarily in trouble simply by the fact of being in scraps.
12. NINE not fine or pine. The clue's quantitative attitude suits the number NINE, there being little point in specifying "pine." One plants saplings, rather than "fine trees" (mature ones as such).
13. SEA not set. Set is a somewhat pointless answer, since the sense of it is already implied by the clue's phrase "in their repertoire."
14. SLID not slip. The clue is framed in the past tense which suits SLID.
15. FEW not new. It is the undesirable, rather than the desirable, that is said to be "liable" to happen.
20. WEEP not weed. "Past caring" — emotionally drained — links up better with WEEP. It is a person who's lost interest in gardening, more specifically, whom you don't expect to weed.
24. ADVENTURERS not adventuress. It is more characteristic of ADVENTURERS to get into physically dangerous situations as suggested. There is nothing very hazardous or intrepid about being an "adventuress" in the usual bad sense.

CLUES DOWN:

1. RESCUER not rescues. A RESCUER might, in an active sense, "prevent loss of life." Rescues are simply what happen, as facts.
2. CREAK Not break. The CREAKing "can be irritating," which is an understatement about things that break — perhaps dangerously or alarmingly.
5. MARKED not market. Market rises are not very gratifying unless they are MARKED, or very definite.
9. TRITE not tripe. As implied, a writer may possibly acknowledge (though not greatly care) that the popular romances in question are TRITE. However, they are certainly not "tripe" as far as the writer is concerned.
11. LISP not limp. The clue suggests something you simply have, or you haven't, in an absolute way. LISP is more apt, since you may limp briefly for some cause. Also, a LISP is understood as a "defect" of speech, though one hardly views a limp as a "defect" of gait.
16. WORKS not words. A writer would be remembered for his WORKS, rather than "his words" in a vague sense.
17. SWEAR not sweat: they may SWEAR, naturally enough. They will quite inevitably sweat.
18. NERVE not verve. "Almost any man" would like to have plenty of NERVE; but verve in the literary or artistic sense, does not have universal appeal. If verve means enthusiasm, there is little to prevent a man having as much as he cares to, any way.

Police union not for staff

The Labor Relations Board has denied an application by 23 civilian employees of the Saanich police department to change unions.

The group asked last year to leave the Canadian Union of Public Employees and join the Saanich Police Association.

But the board ruled Thursday they do not have enough in common with the police officers to justify inclusion in the association bargaining unit.

A number of complex legal issues were raised by the association and the municipality delayed the board's decision several weeks.

One of those issues was whether the employer was Saanich or the police board.

The employees had been considered part of the municipal staff unit for a number of years and represented by CUPE since 1968.

The LRB said it is reluctant to break up a bargaining relationship which has functioned well in the past and that it believes the police association can operate more efficiently if it doesn't include the civilian employees.

Kemano inquiry welcomed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Two environmental groups have welcomed the provincial government's decision to hold a public inquiry into the proposed Kemano 2 project, but still remain cautious.

"It is an encouraging sign," Denis Wood, president of the Save The Bulkley committee, said Thursday.

Jacques Sequin, president of the Nechako Valley Conservation Association, said a public inquiry on the Kemano project was one of the things his group was pushing for.

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said Thursday the project will face the government's new review process no matter who proceeds with it, or when.

Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd., a subsidiary of Alcan Aluminum Ltd., plans to build the dam as part of a $2.5 billion plan to triple its smelting capacity.

McClelland, in outlining the energy policy Monday, stated B.C. Hydro would be responsible for any future hydro projects. On Tuesday, however, he softened his position and said there are several ways the project could be built under his new policy.

Alcan is proposing to go ahead with the project under its 1950 water licence.

Dissident in Canada after 22-year-wait

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year struggle by Soviet dissident Vasili Gorelkin to reach Canada ended Thursday as he and his family arrived from Vienna where they had spent six weeks in a Jewish resettlement camp.

"It's like coming out of prison," the 50-year-old construction engineer said upon his arrival with his wife Nina, 45, their 10 children, and two grandparents.

The Gorelkins said through an interpreter they suffered discrimination and often physical abuse and intimidation because they sought to practise their Pentecostal religion.

Gorelkin is an acquaintance of prominent Soviet dissident Alexander Sakharov and, as a member of the Committee for the Defence of Christians, was regularly in touch with civil rights activists outside the Soviet Union.

Soviet authorities issued the family Israeli exit visas to hasten the emigration process.

Son Simeon, 21, said he was still shocked by his new freedom.

"We can praise God, go to church and share our opinions with others."

The family left immediately for the Okanagan community of Vernon in the company of Gorelkin's niece, Anna Kolesnichenko.

Council photos next?

Maybe pictures of aldermen are the next logical addition to property tax bills now the provincial government has instructed municipalities to tell their citizens about its generosity towards municipal taxpayers.

Ald. Gretchen Brewin made the tongue-in-cheek suggestion Thursday to the finance committee as members discussed briefly Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's directive on revenue-sharing.

Last month he told all municipalities to include on their tax notices a line explaining that without revenue-sharing, taxes would be so much higher. In the city of Victoria, the blank will be filled in with the figure 21.8 per cent.

Brewin thought that pictures of some city councillors, "those who enjoy that sort of thing," could also be included.

Her colleagues just laughed and moved on to more serious business — establishing penalties and procedures for dinging delinquent taxpayers. There were no smiles here.

The deadline this year for payment of taxes is 4:30 p.m. July 2. After that, a four per cent penalty will be applied and if taxes are still unpaid by the close of business Sept. 29, that will be hiked to six per cent.

After that council will sic the city solicitor on everyone who owes more than $2,000. The committee approved a motion directing the solicitor to sue them "as soon as practical" after Oct. 1.

Lodge picks architect for $1M expansion

The Glendale Lodge Society has chosen the city architectural firm of Wagg and Hambleton to design a million-dollar expansion of the Oak Bay Lodge.

The expansion will double the lodge's intermediate-care capacity to 300 beds.

The lodge's board of directors said the main project will go to tender in three months.

The board also announced that a $17,000 project to provide the lodge with a senior day-care program is already under way.

The program is designed to help live-at-homes become more active and independent.

A critical shortage of intermediate-care beds in the region has prompted health planners to give the Oak Bay Lodge expansion high priority.

In addition to creating more space, the project will update fire protection and alarm systems, as well as dining and kitchen facilities.

The elevator will be modernized and hotel facilities for 74 residents improved.

Vancouver hearings urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal commission of inquiry into aviation safety was urged Thursday by British Columbia lawyers to conduct hearings in Vancouver.

Lawyers attending a meeting of the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association were told the hearings, scheduled to begin Feb. 20 in Toronto, represent Phase Two (accident investigations) of the inquiry.

Tom Griffith, chairman of the bar association's Air Law Section, said the commission, in trying to investigate four crashes last year in B.C., is likely to be deprived of vital evidence in Toronto.

Prof held for murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of British Columbia professor Cyril Belshaw has been charged in Switzerland with the murder of his wife, Vancouver lawyer Harry McLaughlin said Thursday.

McLaughlin said his client also was charged with fraud.

The well-known anthropology professor was extradited by French authorities to Switzerland late last week. McLaughlin said under Swiss law an extradited person must be charged formally or released.

Betty Belshaw's nude, decomposed body was found wrapped in plastic bags beside a road in Switzerland last March.

The couple had been living in Switzerland when Mrs. Belshaw, 59, disappeared in early February.

McLaughlin said the investigation into the death is continuing. The process is different from Canada where the Crown normally would complete its investigation before laying charges.

Under Swiss law, the chief examining magistrate is required to report to a Swiss tribunal every two weeks to justify keeping Belshaw in jail.

Belshaw has been under arrest in France since November when Paris police stopped him as he stepped off plane to attend an academic conference.

Belshaw is a former chairman of the UBC anthropology department and editor-in-chief of Current Anthropology, an international journal.

nowledged his party also had contingency rationing plans.

He shrugged off the apparent contradiction by saying there was a major difference between the two policies because his Conservatives were not "running around talking . . . or boasting about it."

"I would imagine we do," the 40-year-old prime minister told reporters when asked if his Conservative government had an emergency gas rationing plan.

"Mr. Trudeau is counting on rationing as part of his arsenal," he said. "What we're saying is that what we have to do is move the country as quickly as we can away from the situation where rationing has to be put in its place."

Canada expels Soviet aide

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is expelling another Soviet official in retaliation for the expulsion of Col. Harold Gold, a Canadian military attache, from Moscow, the external affairs department announced Thursday.

The department said in a statement the government has reduced the Soviet Embassy's commercial section by one person. That means V.F. Trofimov, a member of that section, will be forced to leave in two weeks, the statement said.

This is the latest move in a series of expulsions beginning with the government's decision Jan. 21 to expel three Soviet Embassy officials for spying.

Moscow responded by ordering out Col. Gold last week. Gold, who returned to Ottawa Wednesday, said Soviet charges he was spying are absurd.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has been promising retaliation for some days.

The external affairs department said the expulsion of Trofimov "should not be construed as indicating that Mr. Trofimov was engaged in activities incompatible with his status in this country."

"The measures have been adopted solely in retaliation for the unwarranted expulsion of Col. Gold," the department said.

The statement said Miss MacDonald warned the Soviet Union that Canada would retaliate if Russia expelled any Canadian diplomat for spying because Canadian diplomats in Moscow are not engaged in espionage.

Col. Gold's activities "were fully in accord with his position as Canadian defence attache in Moscow," the statement said.

"Therefore the Canadian government regards his expulsion as completely unjustified," the department said.

The latest move reduces the authorized number of Soviet diplomats in Canada to 63 from 64. The actual number of Soviet officials in this country is 60 because Moscow has not yet replaced the three military officers expelled Jan. 21 for spying.

Adamson killing charge

NAIROBI (AP) — A Turkana tribesman who worked briefly for Joy Adamson has been charged with the murder, apparently for revenge, of the conservationist and author of Born Free, an official in the Kenyan attorney-general's office said today.

The official said the accused man is Paul Nakware Ekai, 23. A friend of Mrs. Adamson said she fired him after an argument with him at her camp near Mount Kenya where she studied leopards.

The friend said he did not know the cause of the argument, but "it certainly appears to be a revenge killing."

"There seems to be no other motive."

Ekai was brought in for a preliminary court appearance Thursday before Chief Magistrate Patrick O'Connor in Nyeri, 160 kilometres north of Nairobi. He was ordered held for another court appearance on Feb. 20.

Ekai was not required to plead to the charge, court sourees said, because consent to prosecute him has not been received from Attorney-General Charles Njonjo in Nairobi. The consent was expected to be a formality.

Ekai was believed to be among three former employees of Mrs. Adamson who were detained for questioning after the body of the 69-year-old woman was found on the night of Jan. 3.

Initial reports said she had gone out for her usual evening walk and had been mauled to death by a lion. Police began searching for a murderer after medical experts determined her wounds were not consistent with those made in a lion attack.

Gunman holds up two stores

A holdup man wearing a toque mask and a black trenchcoat staged two grocery store holdups and got $500 in Duncan Thursday night.

RCMP said a tracking dog failed to locate the bandit, who had a handgun and struck storekeeper Tung Leung when he refused to open his cash register.

Leung, owner of the Yorktown Store on the Trans-Canada Highway, received a head cut.

The bandit tried to open the till himself but fled when Leung's cries for help brought other employees from the back of the store.

RCMP said the same bandit later scooped $500 from a cash drawer at Chow Brothers, Government Street.

$100,000 tab to repair the sag at school

By NORMAN GIDNEY

An attic-to-crawl space restoration of the sagging and decrepit Craigflower school on Admirals Road will begin this spring to return the 125-year-old building as closely as possible to its original condition.

Some $100,000 has been budgeted for the extensive repairs needed to stabilize the schoolhouse, says Russell Irvine, director of the heritage conservation branch in the provincial secretary's department, which is supervising the job.

For example, the second floor where the schoolmaster and boarders lived is so weak only four people at a time are allowed up there.

In the floor boards, joists and walls, rising damp has encouraged fungus and insect growth.

Over the years there have been a number of additions and alterations which have obscured parts of the original building, which was opened in March, 1855.

Architect Andy Cochrane of the heritage conservation branch said the first job will be to hand-dig the crawl space under the school and lay a proper, waterproof cement floor.

There's a shallow concrete wall around the perimeter of the school now, but it causes problems in bad weather.

"When it rains there's a stream running under it," he said.

Upstairs, the second floor will be reinforced with two rows of glue-laminated wood beams strung from vertical steel rods attached to the outer walls.

"That whole roof system is pretty precarious. Everything sags something fierce," says Cochrane.

This will allow the removal of a post in the middle of the school room on the main floor. The sag is almost as old as the school itself, for it seems the beam went in soon after it was built.

Apart from this, the restorers will not attempt to make the building square and plumb, Cochrane says, for it would probably do more damage and the school would no longer appear as most people remember it.

"It's part of the charm of it," he says.

For similar reasons, the present clapboard siding will be left on the school although it is not the type which was nailed to the walls in the colonial period when Craigflower was built. The present siding "looks old" and an authentic, newly-milled replacement would not.

Crews from the Legislative Buildings restoration group have already torn down a lean-to affair on the north side of the school, revealing several original windows which had been blocked up.

A modern cement brick chimney at the back — added as a flue for the school's oil furnace — will be torn down and the restored school will be heated by an electric furnace which can use another existing chimney.

New wiring and burglar alarms will be installed, and extensive repairs to the original plaster may be carried out. Cochrane said the Buildings plastering foreman took a look at the school's walls recently and said the plaster was held "only by the horsehair and the grace of God."

Techniques of the colonial era predate gypsum board and even the narrow laths used in plastering decades ago. The plaster was applied directly to six-inch-wide boards. In some places it is not in place very firmly.

First tenders for restoration work should be going out in a month, Cochrane said, and contracts for work should be let in March.

As restoration is an uncertain business — restorers never know what problems will crop up or how long a certain job will take — the work will be done on a cost-plus basis, Cochrane said.

Cochrane pays tribute to the later Peter Cotton, the Victoria restoration architect who spent an entire year doing 58 pages of "as found" drawings of the school, everything from full-scale views of the school to individual sketches of bits of hardware.

That was the first step, the ground work for the actual reconstruction which will start in the spring, although "there's still a lot of site detection work to do," Cochrane says.

Irvine praises the work of the Native Sons and Daughters of B.C., one of the earliest organizations concerned with the province's history, in preserving the building over the years.

The Native Sons saved Craigflower school from certain demolition in 1929, when they renovated it as a museum after Saanich had leased it to them. Without them there would be no school left today to restore.

Plans for Craigflower after the "stabilization" are to make it an active pre-1871 school room, "so youngsters could be taken out and see how eduction was carried on in the colonial period," says Cochrane.

Now, the school is a museum but with a wealth of objects that do not relate to its past.

"The building sort of collected artifacts that really had no bearing on the school," says Cochrane.

TOWN TALK

At her meeting here this week, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald made several references to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Things like: "The prime minister she said this and she did that."

Possibly Miss MacDonald was musing ahead on things that might happen in Canada. In any case she didn't have her full attention on the present because she told a University of Victoria student audience: "The Canadian government has made $15 million available to contribute to the starvation in Cambodia."

And earlier in the day she had, quite correctly, told a CBC reporter: "You can't stick your head in the sand and run away from your problems."

Almost as renowned for his generous heart as for the brilliance of his artistry, violinist Yehudi Menuhin made dozens of friends at a local bookstore Wednesday.

He was there to autograph copies of the just published Music of Man, which is based on the CBC television program. But people were offering well-thumbed autograph albums, even notebooks and pieces of paper and new and well-read copies of his autobiography, Unfinished Journey.

Menuhin acceded pleasantly to all requests, even for wordy dedications.

One girl apologized as she proffered a notepad, saying she couldn't afford a copy of the book as she was a music student.

Signing the notepad Menuhin turned to the store proprietor and asked for a copy of the book.

"I would like to buy one and give it to that girl," he said quietly.

Unfortunately every copy had been sold and was awaiting his signature.

Our new tourism minister is obviously planning to get right into the swing of things.

Pat Jordan, no stuffy politician she, says she'll be part of a Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce group which will head into the thawing Prairies in early March to trumpet the beauties and attractions of B.C.

It's all part of a major advertising campaign aimed at levelling out the low spots experienced by the tourist industry.

As part of the Victoria delegation, Mrs. Jordan will wear full Victorian dress, with frills, hat, the works.

The spring campaign will be aimed at three primary groups of tourists: Canadians living east of the Rockies who still have snow in their areas, U.S. Pacific Coast residents who rarely experience the distinct season of spring and B.C. residents who want to explore their province before the height of the tourist season.

"I cast no aspersions against Airwest," he said, as laughter subsided.

"It's just a frightening and unnerving experience. I'm a white-knuckle flier," confessed the Olympic and British Empire Games silver medallist.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm was one of the few people at this week's meeting of Highland residents to have a good word for the regional district and its planners.

"Unfortunately politicians always dump on planners because everybody else dumps on politicians," he said.

He also had a word for Langford regional director Ed Lubick.

"I think it's easier to be minister of municipal affairs than it is to be Langford's regional director," he said.

The city will be ocean-deep in salty tales in July, and city council is going along with the nostalgia.

The city will sponsor a reception for veterans of HMCS Haida, the famous Second World War destroyer, when they gather at The Empress for their reunion July 10-14.

The finance committee Thursday approved spending $400 to entertain some former Haida officers and crew and their wives. The Haida is moored in Toronto harbor.

West coast reunion chairman Jack Hannam of Metchosin said the local gathering should be one of the largest.

"Esquimalt was the main new entry base for men and HMCS Royal Roads the base for junior officer training in the Second World War and many of them have not been back since this training."

The glamor, the excitement and the heart-stopping suspense of the Academy Awards may come to the University of Victoria campus.

At least that's the hope of the organizers of the first "Academy Awards" for student films or slide-tapes.

Maggie Vilvang says the tradition of film making in the three residences at UVic is a long one and to date, about 15 presentations are entered in the competition.

Entries range from a serious study of students going through their first year on campus and teenage suicide to one called Gonzo Goes to College.

Awards will be given in the following categories: best picture, best actor/actress, best documentary, best comedy, best cinematography, best script.

. . . impressed

New chief meeting all hands

Victoria's new police chief, former Vancouver inspector William J. Snowdon, has taken over from retiring chief Jack Gregory.

He said today he's spending most of his time trying to meet as many as possible of the 140 officers and constables under his command.

"I guess my main priority is getting to know people."

Daily operations are being left in the hands of deputy chief Jim Smith while Snowdon feels his way.

The 24-year veteran of the Vancouver police force has talked to all the officers and the executive of the police union, discussing some of his future plans. He's also spending some time at city hall meeting other department heads.

"I have been impressed with the kind of co-operation that's been offered to me, because I had some concerns," he said.

The chief is commuting on weekends to his North Vancouver home until he finds one here.

804 new job-seekers; how do they survive?

By AL FORREST

Another 804 job-hunters checked into Victoria in January and not only had a tough time getting work, they faced a challenge in finding a place to stay.

"Quite frankly I don't know how they survive," local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said today.

"There are few jobs at this time of year. But even more bewildering to me is: where are they living?

"The vacancy rate is almost nil. There are almost no apartments and few of them can afford to buy a house."

Pickering has asked his staff to do a follow-up study of the newcomers to see how many are still in town at the end of February.

Of the 804 who came to Victoria looking for work in January, 119 had come from Ontario and 151 had from Alberta.

Just under 400 had come from other B.C. points.

While few of the newcomers can be absorbed now, Pickering said the prospects will be much better in late spring when construction picks up and the tourist surge is under way.

Meanwhile, a survey conducted by local CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed the Victoria economy was stronger in January than at the same time last year.

Hotel and motel occupancy rates were up 40 per cent and restaurant income up 24 per cent.

Retail sales were significantly higher than at the same time last year. A large number of gift items were sold, reflecting the increase in tourist business.

The Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard had 700 employed during January, up from 240 at the same time last year. There could be a few layoffs this month when the hull repair of the Star Opal is completed.

Real estate sales under the Multiple Listing Service totalled $15.7 million during the month, up from $14.6 million one year ago. There were 215 units sold, up from 203.

The number of listings has fallen to 416, down from 730 in January, 1979.

The construction industry continues to operate at only half capacity. Work on the new Victoria General Hospital will start this year but otherwise the picture is not much brighter than in 1979, which was a slack year.

Logging and sawmill operations have been restored to normal levels, except in one plywood plant, which is employing only one shift.

The provincial civil service is posting 80 jobs per week, about six per cent more than at this time last year, mostly replacement positions. Few new jobs are being created.

During January there were 787 new job opportunities posted on the CEC notice boards, up fractionally from 783 the previous January.

Transit survey for Sooke

Sooke residents will be surveyed next week on their public transit needs.

A questionnaire drawn up by the Urban Transit Authority will be published in the weekly Sooke Mirror.

David Langley, of the Capital Regional District's transit planning department, said the results will provide transit planners with useful information. The survey was originally suggested by the the Sooke Forum Council.

It will include questions about the resident's home, work and shopping locations and about the types and styles of transit service desired.

Langley said other areas of the region will probably have similar surveys but because of Sooke's initiative its will be completed first.

Sunpower turns them on

British Columbians eager to step into the age of solar power are swamping the provincial energy ministry wanting to know more about the government's sun-powered water heaters.

The ministry earlier this week announced it would advertise to try and attract people interested in participating in its scheme to install 100 solar water heaters in homes around the province.

Ministry phones have been ringing steadily.

Bob Evans, director of energy conservation and technology, said under the proposal, homeowners will pay two-thirds of the $2,500 installation cost with the government paying the other one-third under a federal-provincial arrangement.

Dr. James Hill, the ministry's renewable energy coordinator, said advertisements containing application forms will be placed in selected newspapers by the end of February.

The newspapers will be in the six areas — still unannounced — where the experimental heaters are to be installed.

"There will be a pre-qualifying step," Hill said.

To qualify, for example, a house will have to have a southern exposure and on a roof with a suitable slope.

"There will also have to be a place to put the storage tanks since we want to avoid destroying the house," Hill said.

Evans said each connection installation consists of a solar collector on the a roof connected to a pre-heater tank.

Once the water is as hot as the solar connector can make it, it will be pumped into a conventional hot water tank to be heated.

Evans predicted the solar heaters will save a householder $10 to $15 a month.

Canuck shuffle follows shocker

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks continued their personnel shakeup Thursday night by dealing veteran winger and captain Don Lever and minor leaguer Brad Smith to Atlanta Flames.

Canucks, who will get veteran centre Ivan Boldirev and left winger Darcy Rota in return, traded winger Ron Sedlbauer — a 42-goal man last year — to Chicago Black Hawks and defenceman Jack McIlhargey back to Philadelphia Flyers a few weeks ago.

Thursday's deal came after the Canucks surprised Philadelphia 4-1, dealing the Flyers their only home-ice loss this season and it left Lever, a veteran of eight NHL seasons, bitter and in shock.

"I guess I'm bitter right now because I'm losing a lot of friends and I won't be fulfilling my dream of helping the Canucks become a real contender," Lever said in Philadelphia. "I think I put a lot of hard work into the organization."

Lever, who will report to the Flames in Edmonton, where they will meet the Oilers tonight, said he thought he was "the marketable commodity" on the team and blamed the Vancouver management and news media for not having enough patience with the Canucks.

"They seemed to have a little more organization this year," he said. "But they're trying to do it (improve the club) by dealing everyone this year."

Lever said coach Harry Neale has given the team a system and stability but he hasn't given the younger players time to prove themselves.

Boldirev, who rooms with Rota and was traded with him to the Flames last year in a multi-player swap with Chicago, said in an interview from Edmonton he didn't have many thoughts about the latest transaction.

"Being traded twice in two seasons, it makes you have a few doubts about your own ability. But going from a fairly good club to one that has been having trouble doesn't really bother me."

Both are expected to be in the lineup Saturday.

Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn, meantime, tried to find some value in Vancouver victory.

The loss, Philadelphia's fourth in 52 games, halted the team's home-ice undefeated string at 26 games, eight short of Montreal's National Hockey League record. It also snapped the Flyers' 11-game undefeated streak.

But Quinn said something positive might come from the defeat.

"We're really glad the streak is over," he explained. "It actually takes some pressure off us."

It was the second lacklustre game for the Flyers, who barely escaped with a tie Sunday against Boston Bruins. Quinn blamed the team's recent poor performances on complacency.

The Canucks bottled up mid-ice and sent a forechecker deep to keep the Flyers from setting up behind their own net. Then, while the Flyers were pursuing missed passes and blocked shots, Vancouver scored its four goals on only 20 shots.

Cougars produce when it counts

Victoria Cougars were battling complacency as much as they were battling New Westminster Bruins when the two teams took to the Queens Park Arena ice for their Western Hockey League game Thursday.

The Cougars took a cat nap for more than 40 minutes and finally woke up in time to post a 6-2 victory for their 11th triumph over the Bruins in as many games this season.

In another game, the touring Brandon Wheat Kings, who face the Cougars in Victoria's Memorial Arena Saturday, clipped Seattle Breakers by an identical 6-2 score. The victory moved the Wheaties into a three-way tie for third place in the Eastern Division.

"It's tough to get up for a team like the Bruins," said Victoria coach Jack Shupe. "We've won every game against them and the players had a little trouble getting up tonight until the third period.

"When it's only a tie game or a one-goal game it finally gets through to them that they've got to play a little bit of hockey to beat them."

After a scoreless first period, the Cougars took a 2-1 lead in the middle frame then took command early in the third with three consecutive goals.

Greg Adams, with his 43rd and 44th goals of the season, led the Cougars while Bob Jansch, Bud McCarthy, Bob Smith, and Daryl Coldwell contributed one goal each.

Andrew Ristau and Randy Wickware scored for the Bruins, who absorbed their 12th consecutive defeat before 1,498 fans.

In Seattle, five second-period goals powered Brandon over the Breakers. Brandon scored goals 57 seconds apart in the first three minutes of the second period after taking a 1-0 lead in the first period.

It was a chippy game that saw the two teams collect a total of 70 minutes in penalties.

Most early IOC delegates back Moscow games site

Times News Services

The executive board of the International Olympic Committee was scheduled to hear today from the U.S. Olympic Committee on President Carter's call for this summer's Games to be moved out of Moscow.

It was virtually certain the IOC, which meets in full session from Sunday through Tuesday, will reject the Carter plan and confirm that the Games go on in Moscow.

Meanwhile, the Lake Placid Olympic organizing group and the IOC said they would appeal a New York State Supreme Court ruling in favor of a Taiwanese athlete who had filed a suit challenging an IOC decision that he could not display his country's flag or play his national anthem in the Winter Olympics.

Saturday night's meeting will see the first contact between the IOC and the White House since the Russians intervened in Afghanistan and Carter began his campaign on the Olympics. The president is sending State Secretary Cyrus Vance to open the IOC's 82nd session. The opening of an IOC session is always a formal affair with long speeches. It is usual for a head of state or his deputy to declare the session open.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, has insisted the Moscow Olympics will go on as planned. Carter has said that if the Russians do not pull their troops out of Afghanistan by Feb. 20 he will not want the U.S. team to go. More than 30 governments are backing him.

The two U.S. members on the IOC, Julian Roosevelt and Douglas Roby, have said they do not support Carter. Roosevelt has declared that a boycott is the way of cowardice and has denounced the Carter administration for interfering with the Olympic Games.

About 76 of the 89 IOC members, including representatives of Canada, are expected for the session. Most of those who have arrived in Lake Placid thus far have shown no signs of even sympathizing with Carter's views. They are all firmly in favor of keeping the Games in Moscow.

If the U.S. team does not go to Moscow, NBC will pull out of its television commitments. That would mean a loss to the IOC of its share of television revenue — about $12 million — which it uses to pay its administration costs and help amateur sport around the world in the four-year periods between Olympic Games.

The court decision on Taiwan in nearby Plattsburgh followed by one day the spectacle of Taiwan's athletes being refused admittance to the athlete's village.

The IOC ruled last fall that only mainland China represents the Chinese people in the Olympic Games and that Taiwan would have to compete under a different name and with a new flag and anthem. Taiwan officials challenged the policy in a court in Lausanne, Switzerland, where the IOC is headquartered. But, on Monday, the Swiss judges upheld the IOC.

The New York court ruled in favor of Liang Ren-Guey, a Nordic skier on the Taiwan Olympic squad who sought to carry the Republic of China flag in the opening ceremonies next Wednesday. Liang had brought suit against the Lake Placid Olympic organizing committee, host of the Games, and had claimed that state and federal governments would be denying him equal protection of the law if they allowed the Games to go on under the IOC ruling.

Weekend in sports

Boxing, basketball and a bit of hockey highlight the first half of weekend watching for Greater Victoria sports fans.

There is also a wide variety of sports on television Saturday and viewers should make sure they save the TV supplement in tonight's paper for the full schedule of events in the Winter Olympics, which start next Tuesday.

TONIGHT

Something a little unusual for fans will be the first B.C. amateur Diamond Belt boxing championships to be held in 12 years. Bouts will be in the Central Junior High School gymnasium at 7 both tonight and Saturday night.

What is more usual, though, for a Friday night is that basketball at both the high school and university levels will most likely attract a lion's share of the fans.

University of Victoria Vikings take on the Lethbridge Pronghorns tonight and again Saturday night at 8 in Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball games in the McKinnon Gym. UVic Vikettes play the Lady Pronghorns in preliminary games both nights at 6:30.

In Greater Victoria High School Boys' "AA" division basketball, Oak Bay is at Vic High, Belmont visits Parkland and Mt. Doug plays at Spectrum.

In High School Girls' League games, Reynolds is at Stellys, Oak Bay plays at Vc High, Dunsmuir is at Claremont and Esquimalt travels to play at Parkland.

In the only hockey played tonight, Saanich plays Esquimalt at Esquimalt Sports Centre. Saturday night, Saanich plays Lake Cowichan at Lake Cowichan.

There's curling, too, as the annual Victoria Senior Men's Bonspiel winds up tonight at the Victoria Curling Club.

SATURDAY

Biggest attraction for local fans will undoubtedly be the Cougars versus Brandon Wheat Kings in their Western Hockey League game at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

During the daytime, though, there are a lot of things on as well like the B.C. Postal curling championships at the Victoria Curling Club with draws at 7:30 a.m., 2 and 4 p.m.

In soccer, there's only one game — in the Vancouver Island Soccer League's first division — which has Oak Bay scheduled to meet Castaways at 2:15 at Royal Athletic Park.

There is plenty of rugby on for the outdoor sports fans with University of British Columbia taking on James Bay Athletic Association in an interlocking game at Macdonald Park, Castaways meeting the UVic Vikings at UVic and Cowichan playing Oak Bay Wanderers at Windsor Park in first division contests, all kicking off at 2:30 p.m.

In the Rugby Union's second division, Oak Bay plays Cowichan at Windsor, Saanich Velox tackle the Norsemen at UVic, James Bay meets the Saanich Agrarians at Layritz Park and Castaways play Vampires at Belmont High School, all at 1 p.m. And at 2:30 p.m. it's Nanaimo versus Royal Roads at the military college, also in the second division.

Running, too, hits the Saturday sports spotlight with the annual Admiral Nelles cross-country road race at Royal Roads at 2 p.m.

Television

Main attraction on the screen tonight is the NBA basketball game on Channel 7 at 7.

Saturday offers a wide variety for viewers, however, kicking off with Sportsweekend on Channels 2 and 6 at noon and including indoor track, ski jumping, swimming and cross-country skiing.

Semi-final round coverage of the Hawaiian Open golf tournament will be shown on Channel 5 at 1:30 or if tennis is your game, there are the semi-finals of a tournament in Florida on 7 at 2 p.m.

At 3:30 p.m. there is the choice of pro bowling on Channel 4, college basketball (Arizona at Oregon State) on 5 and Channel 7's Sports Spectatular which includes world sprint speed skating from Wisconsin, the "Superskates 11" exhibition from Madison Square Garden in New York and the Hollywood Stuntman competition from Hollywood, Calif.

Wide World of Sports features the Canadian Olympic hockey team in a game with Czechoslovakia as well as slalom skiing from Vancouver (on [illegible] p.m.) and international drag racing from Pomona, Hawaiian Masters Surfing championships from Oahu and toboggan championships from St. Moritz (Channel 4 at 5).

Featured NHL hockey game of the night is the Vancouver Canucks against the Canadiens in Montreal which is on Channels 2 and 6 at 5 p.m.

And at 7 p.m. you can watch Those Crazy Canucks on Channel 8, a profile of skiers Ken Read, Dave Murray, Dave Irwin and Steve Podborski.

600 hitters worthy winners

Once again both competitors cracked the 600 plateau in carrying off tenpin awards in the 16th week of the Times Bowler of the Week contest.

Bowling in the Friday Niters League at Mayfair, Henry Loo rolled a 205-222-233—660 series to top the men's division.

And in the Breakfast Club League, also at Mayfair Lanes, Susan Holness went over the 600 mark with a 209-160-232—601 series to grab the women's award.

Good year for the rowing set

Rowers are well represented among the finalists for both male and female athlete-of-the-year honors for 1979.

The awards will be given out at the annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel, March 17.

Janice Mason and Lisa Roy of Victoria City Rowing Club are finalists in voting for the female athletic laurels along with Carol Turney-Loos of the University of Victoria Vikettes basketball squad and Jan Crook of the Canadian women's field hockey team.

Bruce Ford and Patrick Walter of VCRC, Larry Smeltzer of the Western Lacrosse Association's Victoria Shamrocks and world class gymnast Philip Delsalle were selected as finalists for the male award.

A change in policy by the selection committee this year allowed the two pairs to be considered as co-entrants for individual awards rather than teams.

Mason and Roy captured the Canadian open and closed doubles championships and finished 10th in the world championships. Roy partnered Cheryl Mason to victory in the doubles category at the Henley Regatta and Janice Mason won the singles crown.

Turney-Loos, a 24-year-old UVic student, played on her eighth straight Canadian team and set the national squad's pace when it captured a bronze medal at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico and was the leading scorer when Canada won another bronze at the World University Games.

Crook, a 23-year-old UVic student, led B.C. to the national title and then set the pace as Canada finished ninth in the world championship.

Ford and Walter collected the pairs gold medal at the Pan Am Games, collected for the Canadian and U.S. championships and placed eighth in the world meet.

[illegible]er tended goal brilliantly as Shamrocks swept to the WLA league and playoff titles before earning their first Mann Cup national crown in 22 years.

Delesalle, who was named male athlete-of-the-year in 1976 and '78, missed a good portion of the season because of a leg injury but rallied at the end of the year to finish 12th over-all — the best-ever showing by a Canadian — at the world championships.

Large wolf numbers pose thorny problem

It's beginning to look as if we've created a problem of massive proportions on Vancouver Island.

The situation was outlined in a recent Fish and Wildlife Branch report entitled Preliminary Investigations of the Vancouver Island Wolf (Canis lupus crassodon) Prey Relationships.

This, and other information, was also pooled by Sebastian D'Agati and Wayne Zaccarelli of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association into an interesting response to the branch's preliminary wolf management program for British Columbia.

All indications are that a "dramatic increase in wolf numbers occurred over much of Vancouver Island between 1972-1979," says the branch study.

Concern over a declining wolf population in the 1955-70 period led to protective measures — but the population has bounced back, particularly in the northern portion of the Island.

"Preliminary estimates of wolf densities in the Adam River watershed suggest one of the highest densities in North America . . .

"The role of the wolf in coastal ecosystems is largely undetermined at this point in time," continues the branch report. "During extensive and rapid habitat changes due to logging, its population status and impact on prey populations are difficult to assess.

"The potential for significant impacts of wolves on deer on Vancouver Island appears to be high. A severe winter combined with the present high wolf densities and reduced winter range (due to logging) could produce a substantial decrease in deer numbers."

Further along the branch report notes:

"The potential impact of wolf predation on elk populations is less certain. To date, it appears wolves are utilizing elk as a food source but at a rate, in most areas, considerably below recruitment.

"However, preliminary examination of the management unit 11 elk data, particularly from subunit 11-4, indicates that in areas where deer populations are depressed or declining the impact of wolf predation on elk may be increased. Also of concern is that elk vulnerability may be increased considerably during moderate to severe winters, as the elk concentrate in low elevation timber stands."

D'Agati and Zaccarelli reworked some of the branch data to produce some interesting figures.

Based on branch sighting statistics, a conservative estimate of between 1,200 and 1,500 wolves has been established for the Island.

Using food intake requirements, they've figured that 1,200 wolves would require between 1,138,800 and 1,401,000 kg of food per year. By the same process, 1,500 wolves would need between 1,423,500 and 1,752,000 kg.

Deer, by weight, make up around 71 per cent of a wolf's diet. Elk supply about 28 per cent of the diet with the remaining 1 per cent made up of beaver, rabbit and other rodents.

Using these figures, D'Agati and Zaccarelli figure that 1,200 wolves would consume between 21,504 and 26,407 deer per year. If the wolf population is closer to 1,500 animals, they would consume between 26,880 and 33,009 deer annually.

They go on to point out:

"Habitat for both ungulates and wolves is decreasing due to habitat alienation or destruction by land-use practices such as timber extraction, livestock and agricultural development, power and urban/rural expansion."

"The control of wolves must be effected on a site specific basis by trained government personnel in a manner and method to minimize stress and ensure the least amount of harm to non-target species," they explain. "Shooting, trapping, and, in some cases, poisoning will be required. We feel that more liberal hunting seasons, bag limits and trapping, again on a site specific basis, be utilized to assist the Fish and Wildlife Department in attaining its goals."

Our own population and industrial activity has disturbed a delicate balance between predator and prey on the Island.

Only further manipulation can correct the picture.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Illness helps Peter to feel, play better

HONOLULU (AP) — Peter Oosterhuis of Britain was so ill he didn't think he could start the first round of the $325,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

But he felt better Thursday and came to the Waialae Country Club course and shot a 67, two strokes behind the leaders and his best round here.

"I didn't have enough energy to get angry and I played well," said Oosterhuis, 31, whose previous best here was a 69.

Oosterhuis wound up in a six-way tie behind George Burns and Leonard Thompson, who set the pace with seven-under-par 65s.

At 67, along with Oosterhuis, were Tom Watson, Ed Sneed, Don Pooley, Chi Chi Rodriguez and John Schroeder.

Eighty-one of the golfers were at par or better and only the low 70 and ties will qualify for the third round.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby led the Canadians with a 70, while Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., had a 71 and Dave Barr of Kelowna a 77.

Ibbotson setting prep point pace

John Ibbotson of Parkland Panthers and Al Cole of Belmont Braves are locked in a close race for the individual scoring lead in the Greater Victoria Senior High School Boys' "AA" Basketball League.

At the halfway point in the schedule, Ibbotson holds the lead with 103 points, one more than Cole.

Ian Lang of Mt. Douglas is third with 95.

In senior girls' league play Thursday, Mt. Douglas Ramblers extended an unbeaten streak to 11 games with a 76-43 decision over Spectrum, Oak Bay boosted its record to 8-3 by tripping Stelly's 90-49, Esquimalt bounced Belmont 60-37, Parkland topped Victoria 58-40 and Reynolds edged Lambrick Park, 22-18.

Alison Snow set a hot pace for Ramblers with 28 points while Juanita Hearn fired 20 for Spectrum.

Oak Bay was led by Sandy Smith's 23 points while Sue Walton added 18. Sandy Taylor was the top scorer for Stelly's with 17.

Cory Aspden fired 18 points to lead the Esquimalt attack; Gillian Poole sparked Parkland with 18 and Sharon Walker paced Reynolds with 10.

LIVELY PERFORMANCE

0 to 100 KM/h in 15 seconds with the standard 2.5-litre 4-cylinder engine and 0 to 100 KM/h in 12.8 seconds with the optional 2.8-litre V-6. Both these results were obtained using the optional automatic transmission.

FUEL ECONOMY

602 kilometres on a tank of gas. New from the ground up engineering utilizing weight saving materials gives these 1980's a great power to weight ratio. When this is combined with slip stream aerodynamic styling to reduce wind resistance the happy result is a gas saving. A stingy car that still gives great performance.

SEATING FOR FIVE ADULTS

The engine is mounted sideways, so the passenger compartment is bigger. In fact the interior dimensions match those of most mid-size cars.

FRONT WHEEL DRIVE

The heart of these new cars. With over 60% of the weight over the driving wheels, power pulls the car rather than pushing it. So you get great stability as well as great traction on wet roads, snow or mud.

A lot of good names. All in one place.

An adventure to enjoy

Having been aboard the barquentine Our Svanen when she first arrived in the Inner Harbor from Denmark, I can highly recommend the show Squarerigger Comes Home, which starts at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium on Monday.

Douglas and Margaret Havers, using films and slides, will tell of their sailing adventures since they converted her from a three-masted topsail schooner and brought her home.

Thousands have admired Our Svanen since she arrived here last August and believe her to be one of the most attractive sights in our harbor.

Among her admirers are the members of the Thermopylae Club, who are sponsoring Monday's show. Tickets are available at the Maritime Museum or at the door.

Our Svanen is due for another interesting voyage soon. She's off in March to Newport Beach, Calif., where the Havers will be featured at the annual film festival. From there she'll head out on a 16-week voyage. The first stop will be Hawaii, then they'll set sail for Attu, the outermost Aleutian island, heading along the Aleutian chain to Alaska and returning to her home port via the Inland Passage.

Moondance, owned by Peter Dennis and Bob Buffam, won the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's 15-mile race for International Offshore Rule boats on Sunday. This was her first race since she hit a rock and damaged her keel two weeks ago. Her crew were still working on her at 6 a.m. Sunday and barely made it to the start line in time.

Moondance and Steve Merriman's Country Style are neck-and neck in the long-distance series so far. Finishing after Moondance on Sunday in the highly competitive IOR division were Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer, Ross Mathewson's Kotuku, Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian and Jan Huibers' Teka.

Jack Woodward's Puff II was the over-all winner of the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet's Division I in the race, edging Barry Wright's Trade Winds Tri, Bruce Kenning's Arkle, Roy Hingley's Romada II and Hugh Bacon's Encounter.

Gary Jacobi's Salty Dream was top Division II PHRF boat. Next in line were Gerry Porter's Lickety Split; Knotsure, owned by Frank Piddington and Sid Bryant; T. Hayward's Merry, and Dick Readshaw's Massilia II.

There will be two around-the-buoys races Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

In the Sidney area, the Canoe Bay Sailing Club had its first Sidney Channel long-distance race of the new season's series. Ken Martin's Stirling Shamrock was the over-all winner of the 10½-miler.

She was followed by Bob Bentham's Dystocia, Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri, Jim Morris' Madeleine, L. Lampert's Pacific Gold, Don Wilson's Menehune, Russell Searle's Skidbladner, Ron Wickstrom's Windless II, Roger Vale's Temenos and Alec Marshall's Wisp.

There will be a six-miler this Saturday, starting at 1 p.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

Doug Russell's Ithaqua was over-all winner of the race sailed by cruising boats of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailig Association, on Sunday. Finishing after her were Ed Haines' Lotte, Don Ford's Goose and Bill Sargent's Southern Comfort.

An 89-year-old Calgary woman and her daughter are responsible for helping to bring some joy to youngsters from needy homes who belong to a local Cub pack. The Victoria Canoe Club has pledged to take the youngsters on some trips this year and Frank Johnson, who brings out the club's newsletter, wrote his aunt, Mrs. Anne Harrison asking her if she could help out by knitting some toques for the boys.

She and her daughter, Bernice Berry, set to work and in less than two weeks they had knitted eight toques, each with a matching pair of mitts, using Mrs. Harrison's 10-year-old great-grandson as a model.

Maybe some of the Cubs will be along on the club's sortie in the Cadboro Bay area on Sunday. Members will be meeting at the Gyro Park (the end of Sinclair Road) at 10:30 a.m.

If you're using the B.C. ferries between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen this weekend it should be easy to spot students who are taking this year's boating course put on by the Victoria Power Squadron.

In addition to carrying out their usual charting exercises they will be given tours of the ships, including everything from the bridge to the engine room.

Groups of 24 students and four proctors will be on the 7 a.m., 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. sailings both Saturday and Sunday.

This is the second year the squadron has used the ferries for its annual charting cruise. Before that, the students carried out their saltchuk homework in boats owned by squadron members.

Man guilty of wounding to be sentenced Feb. 25

Kenneth Lucas Carter, 44, was found guilty by a B.C. Supreme Court jury Thursday of intentionally wounding his estranged wife, Maureen, 40, during a dispute in a Saanich house April 28.

The jury, which deliberated two hours and 20 minutes, found him not guilty of attempted murder.

He was found guilty of common assault against his wife's friend, June Burns, but not guilty of the more serious offence of assault causing bodily harm.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan will sentence Carter Feb. 25 after a pre-sentence report is prepared. Bail of $10,000 and one surety was continued but Carter was ordered to have no contact with his wife, and Burns and his employer must sign the surety.

The jury returned once to the courtroom during deliberations to ask for a portion of the evidence to be read back and to hear again the legal definition of intent.

The offences occurred in Burns house where Mrs. Carter was staying after separating a month earlier from her husband. Carter went to the house with a socket wrench which he wielded against his wife.

While Burns said she was struck on the head and shoulder with the wrench, Carter testified he was pretty certain he didn't because he had no reason.

Carter told the jury he believed his wife was going away for the weekend with another man and lost his temper. He said he took the wrench to the house "as a form of protection" expecting to find a man there.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old who rifled a secretary's purse while visiting his bail supervisor was jailed for two months Thursday by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

Michael Harold Wright, 1630 Cook, was sentenced on charges of attempted theft under $200 and failing to appear in court.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Wright had been sentenced Nov. 20 to 10 days in jail for forging a $1,500 cheque and was released Nov. 26 when he went to the bail supervisor's office in the Law Courts building for a 1 p.m. appointment.

While waiting, Laughton said, a secretary went to the washroom and Wright went behind a counter and was going through a purse when he was caught. Wright said he was looking for a match but Laughton pointed out that a wallet inside the purse had been opened and a lighter in the purse remained untouched.

Defence lawyer Victor Simpson said his client was trying to figure what day it was and went behind the counter to look at a calendar. He then remembered he needed a match and went to the purse.

The failing to appear charge was for a Jan. 28 court date which Wright missed.

Ostler said the offence was inexcusable and gave Wright two months on the attempted theft charge and an additional seven days on the second charge.

A 33-year-old man who received a six-month jail term from Ostler on Jan. 22 for two counts of uttering forged bank money orders was given another five-month sentence Thursday for the same offence.

William Joseph Duggan pleaded guilty to uttering a forged Royal Bank money order for $462.43 on Jan. 7.

Laughton said the money order, $2.43, was given to Duggan, who changed it to $462.43 and cashed it in Parksville.

Robert Andrew Rac, 19, of Edmonton, was jailed 14 days for obtaining food and drink by fraud last Friday night from the Golen Palace Restaurant, 866 Yates.

Court was informed Rac and a companion went to the restaurant where they had a $9.95 meal and four triple Black Russians worth another $31 and left without paying.

Laughton said Rac was convicted of the same offence Jan. 22, 1980, in Kamloops, receiving a suspended sentence and probation.

Ostler placed Rac on four months probation and ordered him to pay the restaurant.

Jail terms totalling seven months and fines totalling $500 were given 22-year-old Daniel Joseph David Blissett, 1279 Reynolds.

Blissett pleaded guilty to three counts of driving while under suspension and two of driving without a valid insurance policy.

Ostler was told the charges stemmed from incidents Nov. 23 and Dec. 22, 1978, and Dec. 31, 1979.

On each of the first two occasions, Laughton stated, Blissett gave officers a false name of Craig Martin and was released on an appearance notice before officers learned his real identity. On the last occasion, an off-duty policeman spotted Blissett walking to his vehicle and followed him until help arrived.

Blissett had previous convictions for driving while suspended on June 16, July 18, and Dec. 1, 1977, and was fined $250 the first time, a jail term of five months for the second conviction, and a 23-day term on the third. He was also convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on April 12, 1977, in Nanaimo and fined $500.

Saying it was hard for him to recall "more defiant and contemnacious conduct," Ostler handed out consecutive sentences of one, two, and four months on the driving-while-suspended charges, and $250 fines for the no-valid-insurance charges.

Judge Fred Green, noting breath test readings of .35 and .31 and a previous impaired driving conviction, sentenced 40-year-old Joseph Stephen Hibsman, no fixed address, to 14 days in jail for driving with a blood-alcohol reading over .08 Aug. 28.

Hibsman was stopped about 3:30 p.m. by Victoria police in the 700-block Pandora after an RCMP officer had followed him from Esquimalt.

He was convicted of impaired driving in December, 1979, in Grand Prairie and was fined $400.

Judge Lorne Pearce imposed the maximum, $2,000 fine on a driver for having care and control of a vehicle with a blood-alcohol reading over .08.

Max Gerald Johner, 40, of RR 6, Humpback Road, was found guilty. Readings obtained by Colwood RCMP on Sept. 18 were .21 and .20.

Johner had a conviction for the same offence July 26, 1976, in Victoria when he was fined $600 and was convicted May 1, 1977, in Victoria for refusing a breath test demand and fined $400.

Pearce also said he would recommend to the superintendent of motor-vehicles that Johner be suspended from driving for two years.

Also fined for drinking-driving offences were: Dieter Uwe Neumann, 24, of 1157 Johnson, $450; Jose Carreiro Medeiros, 53, of 3977 Birchwood, $450; Robert Henry Jones, 65, of 9637 Second, $400; James MacGillivray, 49, of 672 Vanalman, $375; Linda Ann Clapp, 23, of 2413 Lovell, $350; and Lawrence Carl Michaels, 26, of 1311 McNair, $300.

City man fined in California

A $500 fine and one year's probation has been imposed on a City of Victoria zoning administrator by a Santa Maria, Calif., court.

Fleming Zuhling, 55, was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after a Dec. 19 accident 110 kilometres north of Santa Barbara.

Grits would force Alta. to share oil wealth or else, says Gray

MONTREAL (CP) — Liberal candidate Herb Gray says if his party forms the next government, it would be prepared to use its constitutional powers to force Alberta to share more of its oil revenue with the rest of Canada.

In a Toronto interview with The Gazette, Gray said Thursday that a Liberal election victory would give party leader Pierre Trudeau "a national mandate" to negotiate a broader sharing of Alberta's oil revenues.

Such a mandate would be backed up by the threat of constitutional action, said Gray who is the Liberal finance critic and a former consumer affairs minister.

"There are federal powers under the constitution and unlike (Prime Minister Joe) Clark, Trudeau is prepared to use them," Gray said.

Under the British North America Act, Ottawa has the power to set oil prices in interprovincial trade and could, by declaring an emergency, take jurisdiction over Alberta's petroleum resources.

Trudeau said in an interview broadcast this week that a Liberal government would negotiate an oil increase of less than the $4-increase planned by the Conservatives. He said this would "mean that either the people of Alberta or the multinationals or somebody will be getting less windfall profits."

ELECTION 80

Much of Alberta's revenue from oil now goes into the Alberta Heritage Fund which contains more than $5 billion.

Gray said the Liberal promise of lower oil price increases and a better revenue split for Canada than was set out in the Conservative budget runs the "risk" of leading to a major confrontation between Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

"Trudeau's approach is that Canada is not a community of communities," Gray said. "He is in a position to be tough philosophically.

"Remember, there are no provincial premiers supporting him, so he will have a freer hand," said Gray in reference to there not being any Liberal provincial premiers. "He is in a better position to articulate the national interest of Canada."

Clark loosens up campaigning style

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Clark put a fresh face on his election campaign Thursday, shortening the speech he normally delivers to open himself to questions from a luncheon crowd.

He delighted the crowd of more than 600 when he said a woman whose questioning interrupted his speech in Peterborough, Ont., the previous night made him realize he does not always talk about the issues his audiences want to hear.

The crowd quickly took Clark up on his offer and peppered him with questions ranging from capital punishment and abortion to his wife — topics he doesn't usually mention in his Feb. 18 campaign speeches.

Clark said he favors abolition of the death penalty but would not oppose a free vote in the Commons if MPs want one. He added he supports the general thrust of the current abortion law but wants to see it applied more equitably across Canada.

However, his best response came when he was asked why he and his wife, Maureen McTeer, do not campaign together. He noted that Progressive Conservative party organizers had him leaving Peterborough one night this week only two hours before his wife was due to arrive.

"They'll let us sleep in the same bed, but not at the same time," he joked.

In speeches that were shorter and faster-paced than usual, Clark stepped up his attacks on Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau for not declaring immediately his support for a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow.

Quoting from a Communist pamphlet, which said choosing Moscow as Games host was an endorsement of the Soviet Union's foreign policy, Clark said Trudeau is naive to believe the Russians do not plan to use the Olympics as a "propaganda tool."

He noted that 38 countries support a boycott and asked how many more would have to join before Trudeau would agree to go along.

Later, at a rally in Thunder Bay, Ont., the Liberal "team approach" to this election was the target for Clark's sharpened tongue.

He praised former treasury board president Robert Andras, long-time MP for Thunder Bay-Nipigon, as "a responsible man who took the nation's finances seriously."

Noting Andras's recent decision to leave politics even though he was considered a potential Liberal leadership candidate before Trudeau reversed his November decision to resign, Clark said Andras's move shows a lot about the former prime minister's leadership.

Meanwhile, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, who has been out of the country for most of the campaign, will campaign for a Progressive Conservative candidate in Fort McMurray Feb. 16 and will attend a rally for Prime Minister Clark in Calgary Feb. 17, a party spokesman said Thursday.

NDP will help seniors over Tory tax change

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent complained Thursday about a federal tax change that hurts senior citizens, but his complaint was partly over-shadowed by confusion on his party's policy.

Broadbent told an enthusiastic luncheon crowd of about 800 that senior citizens are paying more income tax this year because of inaction by the Progressive Conservative government.

He said the Conservatives did not renew a general tax reduction of $300 brought in only for 1978 by the former Liberal government.

As a result, the tax reduction dropped to its earlier level of $200 in 1979 and pensioners were forced to pay higher taxes.

Broadbent won loud applause when he said senior citizens have a right to retire to "live a life of dignity" but left reporters confused when he talked about the tax reductions and promised an NDP government would "remove that loophole."

Asked about this later, he told a reporter an NDP government would provide a $300 general tax reduction. But when others pressed for further details, an aide checked again with Broadbent and confirmed that the general tax reduction would remain at $200 under an NDP government.

Instead of the larger deduction, pensioners would benefit from a cost-of-living tax credit plan, first proposed during the May 22 election campaign. It would provide benefits of up to $259 a year for a single person and up to $399 for couples.

Although adults of all age groups would be eligible for benefits, it would be a special help to those on low or moderate incomes, such as pensioners.

On his way to Dauphin from Saskatoon, Broadbent took a brief turn flying a DC-3 airplane but later told a reporter he no longer has a valid pilot's licence.

Broadbent took the controls for no more than 15 minutes as part of a "photo opportunity." Broadbent flew T-33 jets in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

In Ottawa, Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott said Thursday the Progressive Conservatives are twits and the Liberals callous, leaving the New Democratic Party the only "civilizing influence" in Parliament.

In an interview McDermott, whose organization has aligned itself with the NDP from the time it emerged out of the old Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, said the important result of the Feb. 18 federal election will be to give the NDP the power to influence whichever of the other parties forms the government.

Trudeau riled by heckler

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) - A lone heckler rescued a Liberal election audience from boredom Thursday.

Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau was delivering a lacklustre speech, virtually the same as he had delivered for the last four days and the response was minimal.

"Crap!" yelled the heckler and the former prime minister came alive. The audience was delighted. So were Liberal officials.

"Prime Minister Clark wants to tax everything that moves, Trudeau said. "And he may even tax your mouth.

"You may have developed an engine that will operate on the stuff you just talked about," he told the heckler as he criticized the taxation policies of the Progressive Conservative government, which he said amount to a "savage attack" on the forest industry on which this northern British Columbia region depends.

Then he seemed to remember he is not quarrelling with hecklers this campaign.

"I should get down on my knees and apologize," he said, citing a woman who told him as he entered the packed hall he should be his "old arrogant self."

However, he rejected her advice, telling the heckler: "I apologize."

"You can continue shouting until you are blue in the face and that's probably the color of the (Conservative) party you support."

Liberal officials were happy. They had been visibly concerned over Trudeau's uninspired and abruptly-halted delivery of a speech the night before in Kamloops, about 600 kilometres south of here.

Radiation hit 150 in mishaps

OTTAWA (CP) — About 150 persons have been exposed to high levels of radiation in the last 30 years during accidents involving the transport of Canadian radioactive material, an Atomic Energy Control Board accident report says.

There were at least 135 nuclear transport incidents between 1947 and 1978 and 27 were considered serious, the report by the federal regulatory agency says.

In one case, a truck driver was exposed to 50 times more radiation than the maximum of 0.5 rem per person per year allowed under board standards, and in another case dozens of persons may have received more than 200 times the maximum allowable dose.

At least four accidents which resulted in leakage involved containers described by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. as crash-proof.

Incidents outlined in the report include:

— In 1962, during a 14-day journey from Atomic Energy's Ottawa plant to Hoboken, N.J. one of the crash-proof containers began emitting a powerful beam of gamma radiation. A board spokesman said it is conceivable that some of the 66 truckers and workers who came in contact with that shipment received more than 100 rems of radiation — 200 times the allowable limit.

— In 1965, a container aboard a commercial airline flight from New York to Toronto leaked. Three atomic workers, two truck drivers, the baggage handlers, the airplane passengers and 60 air line terminals workers are thought to have been exposed to 10 times the annual allowable dose of radiation. The leaking container spent eight days in the air terminal before being picked up. The package involved in the accident has since been banned in Canada and the U.S.

— In 1972, a shipment containing 100 curies of Cobalt-60 started leaking during a two-week road trip from Montreal to Leechburg, Penn. The board believes 12 persons may have been exposed.

The report also says that a multilayer container, used by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. for its most potent shipments, safely withstood an accident in 1966. The container filled with 25,444 curies of powerful Cobalt-60, toppled from a railcar while it was being moved. The wooden crate containing the 3,000-kilogram package was demolished on impact but the lead-lined container suffered "no loss of integrity," the report says.

Glowing train wheels in Mississauga yard

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The train that caused the largest evacuation in Canadian history took only seconds to derail, but if this week's proceedings were any indication, it will take several months to determine the cause.

The Mississauga railway accident inquiry, to resume Monday, has heard evidence from 14 witnesses during its first week. Most were policemen or firefighters involved in combating the fire and explosion after the Nov. 10 derailment of a CP Rail Ltd. train. Officials say the inquest could last up to three months.

Almost 225,000 persons were evacuated from the city when exploding propane cars threatened to ignite a punctured chlorine tanker and send its potentially-lethal contents drifting over heavily-populated areas.

Robert Armstrong, counsel to the commission, says he will present evidence to show that the first car to derail was a tanker of toluene — a colorless, inflammable hydrocarbon used as a solvent and to make dyes and explosives.

The commission heard testimony Thursday from a Mississauga couple who had a set of wheels from the toluene car land in the backyard of their house — more than a kilometre from where the train eventually left the tracks.

Lynne Riddel said she was lying in bed shortly before midnight Nov. 10 when the train passed her house. She said she heard a loud crack — like the noise of a tree-trunk breaking as it's felled — and a few moments later an explosion.

She said when she looked out the window she saw a fire in the distance and the glowing wheels in her garden.

Her husband, John, said when a neighbor doused them with a garden hose, steam rose for about a minute.

CBC cites conflict in firing reporter

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC has fired its Quebec City radio correspondent for conflict of interest, network spokesman Cecil Smith said today.

Andre Salwyn, a CBC radio staffer for seven years, had been under suspension for 10 days. He received a letter Wednesday informing him he was fired.

The CBC says the firing results from an arrangement Salwyn undertook on behalf of a third party to use network equipment and to ask questions of political leaders provided by the third party.

Smith said the arrangement was an "unacceptable conflict of interest for one of our national reporters."

Salwyn denied Wednesday doing anything wrong and said his union will take the matter to arbitration.

The reporter said he was asked by a French publisher and film maker living in the United States, Philippe de Vosjoli, to purchase the rights to use of CBC film of interviews about the Clark and Trudeau governments.

De Vosjoli, 59, was a French operative in Havana during the Cuban missile crisis in 1962 and was immortalized in Leon Uris's book, Topaz, as a legendary spy.

Contract Bridge B. Jay Becker

It is said that if you go to three different doctors to have an ailment diagnosed, you'll get three different answers. Well, the same thing is more or less true if you consult a group of bridge experts about a bidding problem. To try to prove this, we offer the following question presented by the Bridge World magazine some years ago to 44 nationally-known experts.

"You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

"What do you now bid with the following hand?"

♠Q5 ♡J7 ◇AJ7643 ♣A96

The panel voted: 21 for two notrump; 18 for three clubs; 5 for two spades.

Here are comments by some of the panelists:

H. H. Harvey: "A clear-cut two notrump bid."

L. Hazen: "Three clubs seems to give greater mobility, but I would accept two notrump or two spades." (Said Al Morehead, who conducted the poll: "An amiable type, anyway.")

E. Kaplan: "Two spades. I'm not enthusiastic about the prospects of a notrump contract unless partner can bid two notrump over two spades. However, I do have good values for a spade contract which I want to suggest."

D. Oakie: "With a degree of restraint, I merely say that any answer other than two notrump will not reflect creditably upon the one who advocates it."

V. Remey: "Three clubs. Two notrump is a strong second choice, but I feel I have the right cards to justify a one round force."

W. Rosen: "Two spades. After going to the two-level, a preference does justice to the hand."

A. Sheinswold: "Two notrump. Where, oh where, is the problem?" (Said Morehead: "We dunno. Have you seen your regular partner, Kaplan, lately?")

It can be seen that there was quite a diversity of opinion. Some of the views expressed are downright rambunctious. This writer was among the minority who favored a three club bid. It seemed to me that a strong effort to reach game should be taken. Hence, three clubs, which is a forcing bid.

Two spades seemed inadequate because it was not sufficiently forward-going. Two notrump, although theoretically stronger, did not show the full strength of the hand, and furthermore might make the wrong hand declarer in notrump. Three clubs, though, has the advantage of forcing partner to choose between a suit contract and notrump.

However, readers can freely decide the issue for themselves. You pays your money and you takes your choice.

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid scattering your forces; overcome tendency to be extravagant. Unusual "involvement" tempts you to break the rules. Accent on money, personal magnetism, relationship that could lead to intrigue. Protect self in emotional clinches!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If thorough and cautious, you survive a crisis. Accent on fine print, legal affairs, public relations and clash of ideas. Aquarius, Scorpio and another Taurus play key roles. You are due to "see the light."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You receive message which contains more promise than substance. Be perceptive, analytical and avoid rushing to judgment. Member of opposite sex could ask embarrassing question. Maintain equilibrium — and sense of humor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take time to "smell the flowers." Be ready for change, travel, variety. Accent on lifestyle, family relationships, significant domestic adjustment. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. In matters of speculation stick with number 6.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Focus is on land, property and a "roof over your head." Avoid self-deception, be realistic about places and people. You may be asked to appear before the media. Define terms, know difference between reality and fantasy. Romantic aura prevails.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might be surprised at response to ideas, requests. Ask for what you need, not merely for what you feel might be pleasant. Message will become increasingly clear. Be selective, perceptive and don't spread efforts too thin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money opportunity exists — accent on wider recognition due to better display and distribution of product. Aries and another Libra figure in scenario. One you admire returns compliment by consulting you. Humanitarian gesture is featured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Timing is on target. Circumstances turn in your favor. Accept new challenge, assignment. Special relationship is emphasized. Stress independence, confidence, originality and willingness to imprint style. Leo figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intuition provides solution to dilemma. One who taught you in past could make reappearance. Go after story behind the story. Reject superficial indications, explanations. Fulfill request by institution, organization.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pressures are lifted — you do have right to celebrate. Spotlight on friends, hopes, desires. You make valuable contact through attendance at special event. Social life accelerates. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in exciting scenario. Travel could be in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Face issues as they exist — this is not time to chase rainbows. Means be direct, accept challenge, fulfill responsibilities. Efforts will be rewarded. You receive credit due and potential is enhanced. Scorpio native plays key role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on travel, long-range project, ability to "move with the times..." Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You could fall in love "at a distance." Be cautious in connection with what you put in writing.

IF FEBRUARY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, people are drawn to you with their problems. You respond remarkably well during times of crisis. You are capable of graphically illustrating beliefs, ideals. You have humanitarian instincts, but you also drive a hard bargain. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1980, a year which sees you establishing yourself in home or business.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Don was standing near the heavy iron railings admiring the display of exotic flowers inside the square enclosure. "It's too bad we can't get in," he said. "I'd like a closer look at some of them."

"So would I," Karek told him. "But you're standing on a very special spot. Eleven and five kolacs from the nearest corners and seventeen from the further of the other two."

His Kalotan friend never explained what made it special. But what was the area of that enclosure?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: The square MEAL was 1089.

B.C. Pen inmates mellow as their numbers drop

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About a week ago, eight prisoners in the protective custody unity of the notorious British Columbia Penitentiary were watching television when the guard in the elevated observation cage accidentally dropped his loaded pump-action shotgun into the room.

It lay there on the floor — the chamber empty for safety, but with five other shells in the magazine just waiting to be pumped into deadly action.

The prisoners stared in stunned silence.

And then, one of them laughed.

"Everybody just broke up; they were rolling on the floor; it was incredible," said a prisoner who was there.

"Nobody could believe it, a shotgun lying there on the floor, just waiting for somebody to pick it up," he said, chuckling at the memory. "But nobody was the least bit interested. The screw (guard) was going nuts. He was crazy. He was screaming at us not to touch the thing, to back off.

"But he couldn't have stopped us if he wanted to. He was eight feet up in the air in the cage, and one of the guys could have just strolled over, used one shell to blow the guard away, and have four left to play with.

"There was nothing to stop a guy from doing that, and in normal times, somebody would have.

"The thing is, everybody's mellowed right out nowadays. Nobody wanted that gun because it was trouble. We just laughed at the screw and told him he was fired."

But the mellowness, brought on by a dwindling population at the century-old maximum-security prison, is fading again as the population gets even smaller.

A "thorough investigation is under way," said penitentiaries service spokesman Jack Stewart, who confirmed the incident.

A year ago, perhaps even months ago, a situation like that likely would have caused a tragedy at the prison — scene of riots and hostage-takings.

Protective custody prisoners are notoriously hair-triggered. They live their prison lives in almost constant terror of encountering someone from the general prison population.

"People in PCU die when they run into general pop people," said a prisoner. "In a riot or disturbance, the first thing general population prisoners want to do is take a walk down to PCU and knock off a couple of the skinners."

Skinners — prison terminology for sex offenders, child molesters and informers — form the bulk of the protective custody population. In the prison pecking order, they are at the bottom.

But at the B.C. Pen, the 49 remaining protective custody prisoners have been in a temporary paradise since the last of the general population was moved to the new maximum-security Kent Institution at Agassiz in the Fraser Valley. Kent opened last Aug. 1.

With the general population gone, "for the first time we've got the opportunity to just do our time, quietly and without worrying about somebody sneaking up behind you."

"All that everybody is talking about is doing his time quietly and trying to make some productive moves with his life," said a protective custody prisoner, using the pseudonym of Paul. "You don't hear one-quarter the arguments you used to. People are attending shop and learning, reading, talking. It's almost nice in here."

But the tension is coming back, he said, as people "look around and try to see who's going to be number 13."

The number is important, as penitentiary authorities try to place protective custody prisoners in prisons across Canada.

Officials feel they can place all but 12 B.C. Pen protective custody prisoners in other prisons, but the final 12 probably will have to go to Kent, where there are about a dozen free beds.

"When the general population guys were going to Kent, they were promised that there would never be any PCU at the prison," said Paul.

"At the time, quite a few of the general pop guys vowed that if the authorities broke their promise on PCU people not going to Kent, they'd kill the first PCUer they ever saw.

"It's hard to say whether they were completely serious, but we've all seen and experienced the general pop guys when they got mad, and there's nobody here that wants to go and test them out."

So while the B.C. Pen breathes its last, the tension is coming back to the protective custody prisoners as they make the countdown to number 13.

Oh, those smuggling Canadians!

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadians smuggle more than Americans, says Ingeborg Paulus, a Canadian associate sociology professor at Western Washington University in Bellingham.

Paulus said a survey of U.S.-Canadian border-crossing habits showed that inflation and decreased dollar values have resulted in increased smuggling by Canadians.

"The risk of getting caught doesn't seem to enter into it," she said.

Paulus said smuggling patterns seem to have little to do with age, sex and income.

"The items smuggled for the most part don't have high dollar value," she said in an interview. "But a significant number of people who smuggled said they did so because they felt that to pay duty on purchases would cancel out any monetary gains they'd made."

Paulus surveyed border crossers from both countries during 1976 and again in 1978-79. Her aim was to try to determine to what degree customs policies and the known consequences of violating them influenced smuggling.

"I stood at the border and handed out questionnaires," she said. "I got 270 confidential responses — 148 from Americans and 122 from Canadians.

"The survey revealed that 34 per cent of Americans and 48 per cent of Canadians admitted taking undeclared goods across the border."

Paulus said she believes fewer Americans than Canadians now smuggle because more liberal duty-free allowances went into effect in the U.S. last year.

Americans now are permitted to bring $25 worth of duty-free goods into the U.S. on trips abroad of less than 48 hours — up $15 from last year — and $300 worth if they've been away 48 hours or longer — up $200 from 1979.

Montreal businessman 'hostage' in Iran

NELSON (CP) — A Montreal businessman in Iran says he was abandoned by the Canadian government when it closed its embassy and smuggled six U.S. diplomats out of Tehran last week.

"I don't understand how they can leave me here stranded and take six Americans out," Douglas Browning said Thursday.

Browning, 44, who has worked in Iran since 1973 for the Montreal firm of Stadler Hurter Ltd., says his company left him behind to sort out loose ends when other employees left the country late in 1979, and now his country has deserted him.

"I felt just like I had been deserted. I'm very angry," he said in a telephone interview with the Nelson Daily News. "I'm angry with the (Canadian) embassy.

"They phoned me half an hour before the embassy people left for the airport. The first week I nearly had a nervous breakdown. I didn't know how they (the Iranians) would react to the embassy closing."

He says although his life is not in immediate danger, he has not been given an exit visa.

"I'm not free to come home to Canada. I've been a hostage for six months, but a hostage with the freedom to travel around Iran."

Browning was left in Tehran to sort out legal and financial complications and organize shipment of employees' personal goods back to Canada when Stadler pulled out six months ago because of dire financial straits. The company had a $250-million contract with an Iranian government corporation to build sawmills, plywood plants and pulp mills near the Caspian Sea.

The firm has since gone bankrupt. But it did not inform the Iranians of this, so they still considered him a company representative and wanted him to stay, Browning says.

When he thought he had negotiated his way out of the country — the head of an Iranian development corporation had finally agreed to sign a letter to the police stating they had no objection to his departure — the great Canadian escape story broke.

"The morning I was picking up the letter was the morning the story broke in the local papers about what the Canadians, 'the terrible Canadians,' as they say, did.

"I went to the office and they said, 'We're sorry, but we have to withdraw that letter and from now on you're considered political,' . . . (which means) I have to get clearance direct from their foreign office."

A spokesman for the external affairs department in Ottawa said Canadian officials are aware of Browning's plight, and think he is the only Canadian in that position.

The spokesman said the decision to leave him behind was conscious, because the lives of the sheltered Americans were in danger whereas his was not.

The department advised him to get in touch with the New Zealand Embassy in Tehran. However, New Zealand closed its Tehran embassy and flew its staff home Thursday.

BC Tel negotiations still deadlocked

Federal conciliation officers have failed to work out an agreement in contract talks involving 10,000 B.C. Telephone Co. employees and the next move is up to federal Labor Minister Lincoln Alexander.

Conciliation officers Mike Collins and Archie MacDonald were asked Wednesday by negotiators for the Telecommunications Workers Union (TWU) to report back to the minister that no further progress could be made.

The officers had met six times with both parties in an effort to resolve issues in negotiations to replace a contract that expired Dec. 31.

Negotiations for that contract erupted in a 81-day strike-lockout which began Nov. 24, 1977, and ended Feb. 14, 1978.

TWU said in a statement that an impasse was reached Wednesday because the company refused to change its Jan. 3 wage offer of 15.5 per cent over two years.

Driver bites on old trick

SAO PAULO, Brazil (CP) — A 37-year-old driver felt badly shaken as he got out of his car after a head-on crash. The other driver offered him a drink and he took a hefty swig from a gin bottle. "I've fallen for one of the oldest tricks, but nobody believes me," said the driver who now has been charged with drunk driving.

Saanich policing hit by inflation

Inflation has been blamed for a record $4.4 million Saanich police board budget this year.

A 15 per cent increase in the budget this year is the result of an inflationary wage and price spiral, police board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier commented after a seven-hour police board meeting Wednesday.

Salaries make up 91 per cent of the budget which now goes to council for consideration.

Couvelier said he is satisfied there are no frills in the budget and no areas where council can make cuts.

No provision has been made for new officers but the budget contains an eight per cent pay increase.

Couvelier said the board is in trouble if Vancouver police settle for more than eight per cent.

Under the terms of a 1978, three-year contract, Saanich police obtain parity with Lower Mainland officers this June.

The board cut $20,150 from a capital costs request of $81,225, but the amount still represents a 40 per cent increase from last year.

The board pared $22,300 from the operating section of the budget by reducing training funds and a contingency fund for replacing police vehicles, eliminating money for scuba and underwater diving equipment and a word processing unit, and cutting $3,000 from a $49,000 clothing allowance.

The budget includes $4,500 for moving the youth and community services division to the health services building next to Saanich municipal hall.

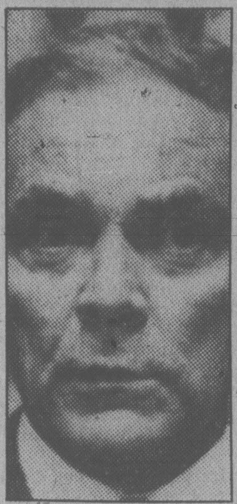
Valentines, yes — but what about a broken-hearted Toronto accountant who enlisted public support in an attempt to get his estranged wife back? He is soon to be reunited with her. Anita Giagnocavo, 25, quit her secretarial job and is flying to meet her husband, Greg, in Daytona Beach after she decided to give him another chance when he presented her with a petition. Giagnocavo, wearing a sign saying "If you hate to see a grown man cry, help save a broken heart," paraded outside a downtown Toronto shopping centre last week, asking people to help him with his marital problems by signing a petition. Within seven minutes he had 11 signatures. Giagnocavo, married in December, 1977, said his wife left him last September because he was so concerned about building up a business that he forgot anything or anyone else existed, including his wife.



Haig

Bill McCormick is so incensed at the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan he decided to protest it — the only way a tavern keeper can. As the owner of Jake's Seafood Restaurant in Portland, Ore., he poured four cases of imported Russian vodka — more than $500 worth — down the storm drain in front of his establishment. There were no regrets — at least not for the moment. Says McCormick, eyeing his liquor stock — "I just hope we never go to war with Scotland."

Alexander Haig, former NATO commander and White House chief of staff, leaves little doubt about his future plans: "I will someday be president of the United States." Haig made his statement at a news conference prior to accepting a civilian award for leadership in Washington.

And there's another contender for the States' top post. Muhammad Ali — stumping Africa on behalf of Jimmy Carter's proposed boycott of the Moscow Olympics — says Carter is "the best white man" for the job right now — but predicts he'll be in the White House in 1988. Said Ali, in Nairobi, Kenya, "For 20 years I have been a popular man. The Beatles have come and gone. Cars have come and gone. Presidents have changed. Cities have changed. But I am still popular. I will get the votes and when I become president I won't lie, because other presidents lie ..." Besides, he adds, "I am the right age and I am handsome."

Dear Abby:

I am 49 and have been divorced from my ex-husband for over 20 years. All that time I have been bombarded with letters from him telling me he has never stopped loving me — even after marrying a German woman while stationed overseas.

He has constantly written that he has never known genuine love and sexual satisfaction with any other woman, and I am the only one for him. Abby, such letters would come every day for weeks, and never less than 20 letters a month!

I replied with love and friendship — knowing he was living with another woman in Ontario. He phoned me two months ago, saying he couldn't live without me, that he would tell the woman he was living with that she would have to leave, and begged me to join him. (I was in Saskatchewan.)

I quit my job, packed all my belongings in an enormous U-Haul, and drove to Ontario. It took eight days. I called his home, and a woman answered, so I checked into a motel and called him again. He came right over and told me not to worry -- the woman was leaving.

He stalled me one day at a time for two weeks. I finally had to find an apartment because I couldn't afford the daily motel rates.

Meanwhile, it became clear to me that the woman was not leaving. He would come to see me, professing his love and wanting sex, but I said not as long as that woman was living with him.

I feel like a fool. I asked him why he asked me to come to Ontario while he was still living with another woman. He had no answer. Since I'm not a wealthy woman, I must find employment. I have to find activity, interests and friends or I'll go out of my mind.

I've had crying spells and I'm lonely and depressed. I broke up my home and life to be with this man, and it's turned out to be a disaster.

He's 60, retired from the armed forces and works for the province.

Abby, what should I do? Should I confront him and the woman he lives with?

Desperate and Bewildered

Dear Desperate:

Don't confront anybody. Admit that you made a big mistake when you disrupted your life to join him. Tell him you never want to see him or hear from him again. Then either go back to Saskatchewan where you have friends, or try to make a new life for yourself where you are.

Dear Abby:

Are we growing selfish? I see so many letters in your column from people who resent drop-in guests. Why?

If a friend came to my front door, and apologized for coming without an invitation, I would throw my arms around her (or him) and say, "Anybody who wants to see me does not need to wait for an invitation. I feel complimented that you wanted to come."

Short of exercise? Take it sitting down

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The toughest part about "deskercising" is putting up with wiseacre colleagues.

"What's the matter? Got a cramp?"

"Quick, somebody call an ambulance. He's having a seizure."

"Is he drunk?"

It's very difficult for the sensitive, recently-paunchy person who is still in shock from discovering that he wouldn't be able to continue to eat like a hog and stay at 145 pounds all his life.

Then the editor comes along and says, "Say, you'd be perfect for this," as he hands over a copy of How to Keep Fit At Your Desk the Desk.r.cise Way.

This insidious little tome is by Douglas MacLennan of the Fitness Institute in Toronto. It's a Totem Book — rather slim, with 30 photos and illustrations — published by Collins and the cover price is $1.95.

We include all that information for all the sadists out there who would surreptitiously and anonymously drop a copy on an unfit friend's desk or kitchen counter or favorite restaurant table.

It is not that it isn't a good little booklet (32 pages with a soft cover), it's just that once you give it to a sedentary sort, he or she feels instantly compelled to give it a try.

Not trying the pictured exercises leads to guilt (but a nice slice of chocolate cake with a glass of milk can soon fix that); trying leads to pain — stomach pains. They soon translate as hunger pangs but the chocolate cake can handle that too.

You want to hear a little more about the book? Okay.

It kicks off by spelling out the dangers of desk work and the perils of passivity.

Did you know the average adult in North America spends 14 of every 16 waking hours sitting down?

Well, those sitters, those sit-down slobs, those sorry sadsacks, are more susceptible to stress disorders and suffer a higher incidence of coronary heart disease than the outdoorsy set do. And they suffer it earlier in life too.

It should be noted that often a person's weight problem lands with a thud after he quits smoking. Everyone tells him how much better he'd feel, how much healthier he'll be. No one mentions how much hungrier he'll be or how much heavier he'd get. He escaped emphysema only to find himself susceptible to heart diseases. And now he's taking it all — sitting down.

So we're talking fitness, not obesity, so let's get on with it.

Once the book has convinced you that maybe you're out of shape, the book asks How Fit are You? Now what they really mean is, just how far over the hill have you gone.

First they want you to check your cardio-respiratory efficiency. That means hopping up and down on a foot-high stool for a while and checking your heart beat at the appropriate moments.

That's the Kasch pulse recovery step test. Then there's the sitting reach test (the sitting part we've mastered), the muscle bent-knee sit-up test and — are you ready — the pinch test!

"Standing relaxed, in brief attire (this is murder when the office is crowded), see how much skin and underlying fat you can pinch up with your thumb and forefinger in your fleshiest areas such as your abdomen, side of waist, front thigh, and back of your upper arm. Tighten the muscles first so you pinch up only skin and fat. The thickness of the skinfolds will tell the story."

Story? They mean "horror story."

The little chart at the bottom of the page says that less than ¼-inch is excellent, ½-inch is fair, and one inch or more is very poor.

And you thought that two-inch roll made you pleasingly plump.

Well, if you've stayed with the booklet past the testing, you might actually find yourself in the Desk.r.cize program.

You'll discover that every single exercise pictured and described can be done sitting down. Now can that be so bad?

If you have a private office (with curtains if there's a window) and you can lock the door, you might actually find these exercises fun.

But if you're in one of those coprorations or government office that's adopted the open concept, brace yourself.

"The squeeze" and "seated push-ups" will convince people you have a violent stomach cramp. "Parade drill" has all the dash and style of Nazi goose-stepping.

They might ask what you're smoking if you do "head circles," and the "shoulder shrug" will draw all sorts of anti-French feeling.

Don't think you'll be able to astonish only your pals at the office. There are also exercises designed for planes or buses and in your car.

There are two that should prove particularly interesting when you're whipping down Blanshard in the early morning with all the other drones.

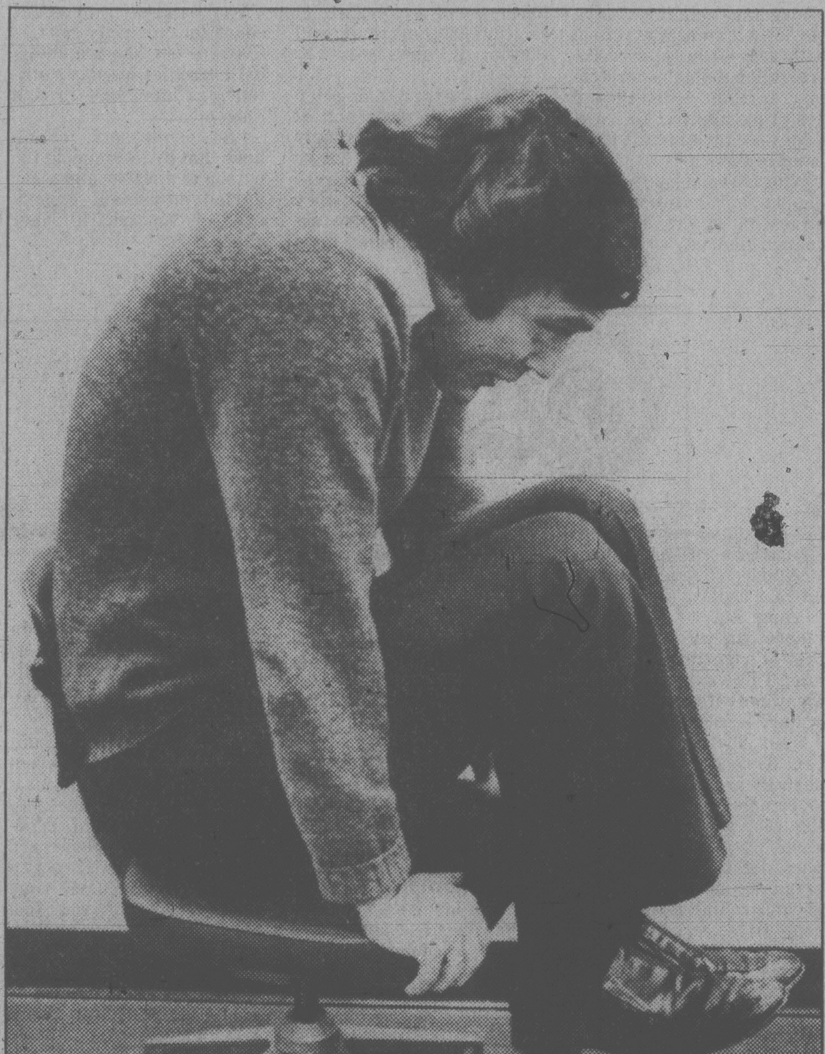
Consider the "back arch."

". . . bringing your head back so you're looking at the roof of the car." And they want you to hold that position for a count of three.

If you're going fast enough you'll be out for the count, and maybe a little longer.

Another gem designed to make life on Victoria streets more exciting is the turnaround. They want you to hold this position for a count of three also, and they want you to do it five times each side.

At least you'll get to recognize those drivers in back of you.



The squeeze. . .firms abdomen and stimulates breathing

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

My husband and I differ in our reaction to pain. A slight infection, a bellyache or a toothache throws him for a loop. I'm able to tolerate much more pain. This bothers him, too. What is it that makes this difference in people?

Mrs. M.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

When I read your letter I had an immediate flashback of a frequently televised commercial that so definitely highlights the difference in pain thresholds of men and women. I'm sure that many women readers have been irritated by this massive ox of a man who deliberately wakes his wife out of a profound sleep with his question, "Barbara, are you awake?" "Now I am," the poor woman answers, and he proceeds to complain about his stuffed nose.

I'll whisper this quietly and hope that my male readers will forgive me. I really believe that, in general, the man's tolerance to pain is less than that of a woman.

Some people are severely distressed by the slightest amount of pain while others can take it in stride, bear it and function well in spite of it.

The capacity to tolerate pain is known as the "threshold" of pain. Thresholds themselves tend to vary under different circumstances. Even those who have a high threshold for pain may suddenly find that their tolerance is lowered when there are special stresses or emotional upsets.

Thresholds for pain are not a comparative game. Neither children nor adults should be stigmatized by their reactions to emotional or physical pain.

Dear Doctor:

Twice in the past year my lower lip suddenly began to swell after I ate a boiled lobster. This was called an allergy. Is it possible to develop that at my age of 40? I've eaten lobsters all my life without this happening to me.

Mrs. H.A.F.

Dear Mrs. F.:

Certainly, it is unusual for someone to develop an allergy to a food that one has eaten for many years. It is not easy to explain, but it has been repeatedly reported by allergists.

The condition is known as "angioneurotic edema." By the name one would infer that the conditon is neurotic in origin. It is not. It is simply the medical term used to describe an allergic swelling.

You are one of the favored few who have been able to identify an allergy-producing food. In many instances, this becomes difficult.

Frankly, I would stay away from lobsters, delicious as they are.

Special needs picture brightens

In the Capital Region awareness of special needs citizens is slowly increasing — lowered curbs on sidewalks, street level entrances to public buildings and businesses and special education programs for improved access to activities others take for granted.

However, there are special needs that can only be met through volunteer work. People with physical, mental or emotional disabilites are involved in many different programs that provide a variety of opportunities for volunteers. The emphasis is on personal development. The goal is the achievement of an independent and active place within the community.

Some of the volunteering opportunities currently available through the Victoria Volunteer Bureau are . . .

A mental health activity centre offers a variety of activities to its members. Volunteers are vital to these programs, and there is always a need for more people to help. For example, male members would like to use simple hand tools to create small wooden objects and need a male volunteer to help them with these projects. Tools would be provided and the volunteer would come to the centre which is centrally located. The time involved, during weekday hours, would be arranged to suit the volunteer.

A social and activity programa in the Elk Lake area provides an opportunity for residents from a number of institutions and boarding homes to get together with community residents and volunteers for social, recreational and handicraft activities. Assistants are needed to participate in games, cards, cooking sessions, shopping tours, discussions, and other activities from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on weekdays. Good health, a willingness to learn and the ability to work and socialize with people with special needs are essential.

A small group home for mentally handicapped adults would like to involve volunteers in a number of ways. A volunteer is needed to mend the residents' clothes. The volunteer could work with the residents at the home to accomplish this task or could work at home, picking up the clothes or having them delivered. Thursday or Friday evenings residents go on shopping trips and a volunteer is required to assist with these outings. A resident would like to go on casual outings on Saturday afternoons and would like the company of a volunteer.

A local organization that provides life and work skills programs needs helpers for a basic cooking course. The teacher needs assistants to work with approximately six students one half day per week. Volunteers should be patient and willing to help. Some expenses can be provided if neecessary.

An agency providing multiple services to the community has a young male client who needs to spend time on regular basis with a man 19 years or older. The boy has some learning disabilities and does not have much social contact with other younsters or adult men. He needs to have regular physical activities like skating or swimming at least once a week.

A guest home that provides psychiatric patients with a chance to readjust to society in a family tupe environment needs a volunteer to run a current events program. It could include films, speakers, or discussion groups. The volunteer could set the times for the program during the day or the evening.

A residential hospital for disabled children needs volunteers to work in a gym setting. Activities may include circuit training, organized games and skill development. Positions are available in both days and evenings. Volunteers would work at least one hour a week and should be at least 17 years old. A background in recreational or gym activities would be helpful.

The hospital also needs volunteers to work one to one in the Bliss Symolics Program. The Volunteer would verbally interpret residents' thoughts as they are indicated on the Bliss board. On the job training is provided. Volunteers should have patience and the willingness to do a bit of "guesswork" sometimes.

Volunteering has many rewards. Personal enrichment or the improvement of job skills are only two. But to see our volunteer work stimulating a positive change in the life of another is one of the greatest rewards. In helping others explore their potential, we may discover more of our own. For further information on these and other volunteer opportunities contact the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Body patterns vary

WINNIPEG (CP) — Adults often wrongly assume that children have the same "movement vocabulary" as they have, says Kally Kennedy, instructor in creative dance for children at the University of Manitoba.

"We have children coming out of elementary school with very little rhythm, coordination, balance, stretching, curling, twisting and gesturing ability. All these things we try to teach them in these classes."

With 120 youngsters, ranging in age from two to eight, enrolled in the 20-week course, Kennedy's Saturday morning classes are full and there's a waiting list of almost as many more youngsters.

The figure has risen considerably since 1972 when Ms. Kennedy first taught a class of 15.

"Right at the beginning, I teach them to advance in rhythm to the music and they love it," she says.

"Then we try it taking step by step to the rear and at first the youngsters simply are not able to do it, but go slightly sideways because they instinctively feel they must make sure there actually is space behind them or that they won't bump into things or fall.

"They soon learn that, of course, and it's progress from then on."

In just a few months, she says, the children develop such grace and co-ordination that their parents find it hard to believe.

The basis of movement education, Kennedy says, is a realization that the individual expresses his inner attitude and intentions through movement.

"So, conversely, we believe that by introducing the person to a richer and more varied movement experience, we can enrich his inner experience."

wheels

by mike lamm

Dear Mike: Do snow tires affect gas mileage? Our 1976 Lincoln usually delivers 14-15 mpg, but we noted in a recent trip with snow tires that it's getting only 12.7 mpg. This was over the same highways with the same type of fuel. — Snow Tread

Dear Tread: Yes, snow tires do need more energy to keep them rolling. Ironically, completely bald tires give the best gas mileage. The knobbiness of snow treads plus slightly more flexible carcass construction create greater rolling resistance in snow tires. Add to that the fact that snowy and icy roads make for some wheelspin and that you usually have to change speeds more often on winter roads than on dry, clear pavement, and you're bound to note a drop in fuel mileage.

Dear Mike: The quartz-crystal clock in my 1977 Ford LTD worked well for 2½ years. For the last few months, though, it stops and starts. — Out of Time

Dear Out: Most digital quartz clocks have two hot leads — one to the timekeeping mechanism and one to the display. The display lead is hooked into the ignition switch and lights up only when the key is on. The timekeeping lead is hot all the time — or is supposed to be. If the display is working and the timekeeping function isn't, I'd suspect a break or short somewhere in that lead. So before you go into the clock itself (if it's openable), be sure to check the wiring.

Dear Mike: My Mazda GLC makes a loud click or pinging noise when I shift gears while accelerating. — Popper

Dear Pop: Are you sure you're not hearing the engine backfire into the muffler? Many cars backfire during deceleration, especially with today's lean carb mixtures. Backfiring can take the form of one solid pop when you lift your foot off the accelerator. Check by revving your Mazda's engine while standing still. Does it pop when you let off? If it's not a backfire problem, though, I can't diagnose it from here.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I'm a 14-year-old girl. I am thinking of running away from home. I can't stand my mother. She picks on me, she beats me, she shouts at me, she gets mad for no reason. She is always comparing me with other people's children. She never accepts me the way I am.

For instance, she went to visit her sister who has a daughter and a son. The daughter is about 12. When she came back she started talking about how her sister's daughter writes better than me. If we go visit her sister and my cousin talks about boys, she doesn't say anything. But if I say anything about boys, she's ready to shout and things like that. I have not had a boyfriend in my life, I don't drink, I don't smoke and I have never had sex. Once my cousin called and asked me if I was a virgin; my mom was listening on the extension line and as soon as she heard the word "virgin" she told my cousin not to call here talking about that.

She has never said she's proud of me. I don't treat her badly. I give her money because I work; I help with the housework and I do anything she asks me to do while she's out. I can't stand her anymore and I'm starting to pack.

Answer: Well, mothers, if you want your 14-year-old daughters to leave home, that's the way to treat them.

As for the daughter, you should call NEED at the number below. You need the help of a third party who will take your side, and at the same time help your mother see how selfish and childish she is being. She probably never has accepted the fact that she herself has grown up, and the things that go with that, such as sex and taking responsibility for a child. Someone should hear her side of the story, too.

Dear Dr. Powell: I thought since you were a doctor maybe you would help me. I am a teenage girl with a problem. About eight months ago I went and got a tattoo. Now I regret it but don't know where I can get it off. It's not noticeable unless I go swimming which I often do. It's very small; on my right shoulder.

Answer: A tattoo, as you realize, is a permament mark produced by injecting dye into the skin. It can only be removed by plastic surgery. Depending on the size and shape of the tattoo it can sometimes be cut out and the edges of the skin sewn back together.

There is only one way for you to find out. You should see your family doctor and discuss it with him. He may refer you to a plastic surgeon who can remove it surgically.

Dear Dr. Levine: I am 16 and have a boyfriend who is 18. We've been dating for two years. I know I love him because he is the first real guy I had. He says he will never let me go. We have made love more than once and I am not ashamed.

For my birthday he bought me a promise ring. Now I find that I am pregnant but I love it, and so does he. Now he said that we will get married soon. I still look at other guys, but I don't want to. My biggest problem is my mom.

I just know she will not understand that her little girl is going to be a wife as well as a mother, but I hope she will take it well.

Answer: I must tell you that I usually get very concerned when I hear about people your age getting married and especially when they are pregnant. All kinds of questions run through my mind. Are they sure that they're doing the right thing? Do they even know what love is all about? What will they use for money? What about their schooling? And why a baby so early on? Do they realize the enormous responsibility — and amount of work — involved?

I can only be honest with you and say that these and other questions have crossed my mind in response to your letter. I don't know what month of pregnancy that you're in, but you should at least discuss your pregnancy with the staff of an adolescent clinic.

I urge you to speak to your mother, and try to understand her concerns. And please go to a physician or a clinic that deals with adolescents or a family doctor who can help you.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

Old maid on stage

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Gian-Carlo Menotti's comically sardonic brief opera, The Old Maid and the Thief, originally commissioned by NBC for radio broadcast in 1939, is to be given two performances at University Centre Auditorium. Performed by a cast of students from the University school of music, it will be seen Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m.

Collaborating will be members of the UVic theatre department. The opera will be accompanied by the University of Victoria Orchestra conducted by George Corwin.

The story concerns a middle-aged spinster and her young servant who give a handsome beggar a night's lodging. Both women are smitten by him and even though the spinster believes him to be an escaped convict, she joins her servant in robbing a liquor store to provide him with funds.

However when she finds herself rejected she goes off to report him to police, but on returning home discovers the pair have out-witted her.

The role of the old maid is shared by Barbara Ebbeson (Feb.10) and Elizabeth Burke (Feb.11). Laetitia, the servant, is Susan Sereda on Feb.10 and Brenda Hak, Feb.11. Bruce Jennings is Bob, the beggar. Lorna Stansfield and Paul Nash round out the cast. Stage director is Terry Gunvordahl.

Preceding presentation of the opera Corwin will conduct Rossini's overture to La Gazza Ladra; Elizabeth Zunti will sing L'amero, saro costante, an aria from the lovely but lesser known Mozart opera, Il Re Pastore, and Susan Westmacott with Miranda Wong at the piano will perform Mozart's soprano scene and rondo, Ch'io mi scordi di te?

The singers are from the classes of Selena James, Jean Letourneau and Bernard Turgeon. Miranda Wong is from the class of Robin Wood.

Admission is general, $3, students and senior citizens, $2. Tickets may be obtained from the box offices at University Centre, Hillside Mall and McPherson Playhouse.

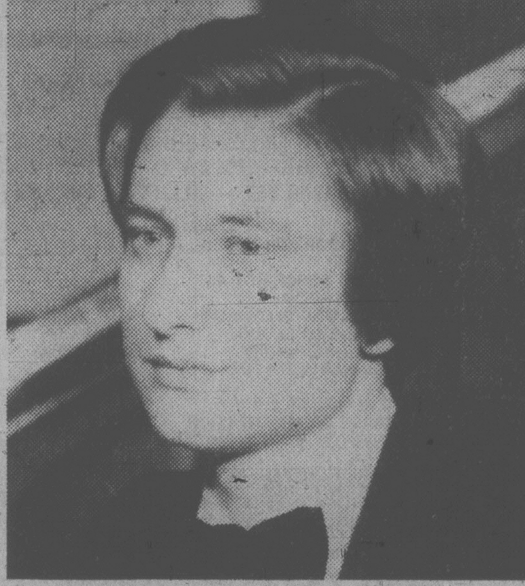
Musical Art Society enters 50th season



Prossnitz. . .in recital

An exceptionally promising young Victoria-born artist will help one of Victoria's oldest continuously active musical societies mark the beginning of its 50th year on Sunday.

Pianist Walter Prossnitz is being presented in recital by the Victoria Musical Art Society at McPherson Playhouse. The program starts at 2:30 p.m.

Prossnitz studied here with Robin Wood for several years, winning many awards, among them the grand aggregate prize for the most distinguished performance among all finalists at the National Music Festival in Toronto in 1977.

He also won second prize in the California Young Pianists Competition in 1978 and B.C. Cultural Fund Professional Study Awards for 1977 and 1979.

For the past year he has been studying in Vienna with Josef Dichler at the Vienna Academy of Music. He will be returning to Vienna following his guest appearance with the Victoria Symphony in April when he will perform two concertos with Paul Freeman and the orchestra, one of which will be a world premiere.

For his Sunday concert he has chosen to open with Schubert's Sonata in A Major D 959. This will be followed by four Mazurkas by Chopin; Op.17 No.2 and No.4, Op.33 No.2 and No.4 and Schumann's beautiful Carnaval Op.9. The numerous parts of this work include much that will be familiar to lovers of piano literature, and many exquisite impressions under such subtitles as Pierrot, Arlequin, Papillons, Chopin and Valse Noble.

Victoria Musical Art Society entered its present phase in 1930 having previously been known as the Ladies Musical Club, an organization formed approximately in 1910.

It is particularly apt that the first concert in the Society's 50th year should be given by a young professional artist who is in a sense, an alumnus, having been a member of both the junior and intermediate groups of the Society.

Victoria Musical Art has a fine record in this city of assisting students and young professionals by providing a showcase and through its annual scholarship competition.

In addition it makes bursary awards each year in the Greater Victoria Music Festival through which Prossnitz first came to the fore as a major talent.

Little legal plan action

Second of two parts

Pre-paid legal fee plans, already popular in the United States, are attracting a lot of interest in Canada, but not much action. The Canadian Bar Association seems to favor them, but labour groups and the insurance industry are sceptical.

If we take our experience with medical insurance as a guide, we can predict that use of legal services will increase if a substantial number of us sign of for these plans.

One of the advantages put forward by proponents of pre-paid legal plans is that they would encourage "preventive" legal services — the client would get advice before the problem got complicated. That would avoid much of the expensive, long-term legal action that clogs our courts.

(Though medical insurance hasn't done as much as we'd like to help us prevent sickness, it has changed some of our attitudes toward going to the doctor. When we don't have to pay for each visit, we are more likely to go earlier, before the sickness has developed beyond help. Legal insurance might follow a similar pattern.)

If everyone had a legal insurance plan, that really offered adequate coverage for potential legal action, we would each (theoretically) have adequate access to the legal system.

But we might see lawyers "opting out" the way doctors have. Then the wealthy would have access to a greater range of legal talent than those who had to settle for a lawyer who charged no more than his insurance would pay. The situation is something like that now.

As we mentioned last week, it is partly due to high costs that most consumers do nothing about legitimate consumer complaints.

One of the arguments raised against pre-paid legal insurance is that Canadians would adopt a "sue me" attitude. As it is, that is a position often taken by big business and people who can afford lawyers. If a consumer has a legal right to compensation, it only makes sense that he should be able to get it, through the courts if necessary.

Another fear is that courts would be clogged with frivolous claims. That could be kept to a minimum with "deductible" clauses in each policy.

All scehemes so far proposed in Canada have an "open-policy" plan. That means policy-holders can choose any lawyer they like. Some union spokesmen have warned that an "open-policy" could be unsatisfactory. They say there would be no way to control quality of service or accountability.

But some lawyers fear that "closed panels", where the policy-holder would have to choose from a restricted list of lawyers, would encourage mediocrity and actually hurt the quality of services.

It would seem that some compromise between these two positions could be worked out.

But without doubt, the prepaid legal plans are not going to solve all our legal problems.

Richard Gathercole, professor of law at the University of Toronto, points out that plans of this type assume that the legal system must go on just the way it is. Perhaps, he suggests, we should consider other options as well.

For example, we might allow more active competition among lawyers. This would include advertising, competive fee ytructures, and more reliance on the legal "clinic" instead of the legal "firm".

(Currently, lawyers seem to congregate in downtown urban office buildings, where overhead is extremely high. Clinics are usually in low rent settings, keeping costs down.)

Another option is the contingency fee system. 'Mr. Gathercole explains that that is where the lawyer take on a civil action in exchange for a percentage of any money the court awards. Lately, we have seen reports of many cases in the United States courts where juries have awarded tremendous amounts to the victims of negligence. On a contingency scheme, the lawyer would be well paid for his work if his client won, and not paid at all if the client lost.

Many Canadians find this option distasteful, and the large awards made in U.S. cases have alrmed corporations, individuals, and insurance companies here. It is possible that the large awards are often due to the fact that the victim is facing a sympathetic jury, swayed by the emotional appeal of the case. In Canada, Mr. Gathercole points out, this type of case would be heard by a judge alone, and that would likely cut down the size of payments awarded.

Another option we could consider is more extensive use of para-professionals for less complicated tasks.

In Quebec and British Columbia, for example, it is not uncommon for a notary public to handle simple real estate transactions. Ontario regulations are so complicated that almost every sale requires the help of an attorney. Simplifying those rules and procedures would benefit all of us.

Trained professionals could also handle simple wills, leases, minor contracts, small claims, incorporating a small company, and so on.

This would bring down the costs of these services. One of the problems with pre-paid legal services is that it might encourage unduly high legal fees, since "the insurance will pay for it."

Mr. Gathercole stresses that "Any plan that will give people greater access to legal services they need and are entitled to is good in itself." In that sense, pre-paid legal services would be beneficial. But we can accomplish the same goal through the other changes as well, he suggests.

Consumers would do well to evaluate any pre-paid legal plan carefully before signing up for it. It might be extremely helpful in some cases, and unnecessary in others. Until other, more complicated options can be put into effect, it may be the only way many of us can afford unexpected legal fees.

Surprisingly, it pays to shop around for a lawyer, too. In one study by University of Toronto Law Schol professor Barry Reiter, fees for real estate transactions varied from $100 to $1,000. Though the Law Societies set minimum fees, many lawyers are doing it for less in order to draw clients.

Consumers might as well take advantage of this kind of competition.

Ironing is easier when you use an iron that's best suited to your needs!

There are basically three kinds of irons available:

First, the dry iron which is used mostly on pre-moistened fabrics. This kind, although inexpensive, is not too popular because clothing usually must be prepared by dampening or moistening with a damp cloth.

Next, the steam iron which pretty well eliminates dampening. The most basic model offers steam and dry settings, while others feature spray, steam and dry alternative settings. Now, there is even one which releases on extra measure of deep, penetrating steam to help remove deep-set wrinkles. Self-cleaning is the newest feature . . . hot water is emptied and the extra powerful burst of steam blows sediment out of the ducts and vents.

Third, the travel iron which is compact and light weight for convenience when travelling. Dry and steam models are available. An electric current adapter often is included to ensure use around the world.

When selecting an iron, look for:

— a handle that is comfortable for you. Lift the irons you are looking at. Go through the motions of ironing.

— a comfortable-to-use, heat-resistant handle.

Gigolo's jig up, but not out

soap opera scene

By JOHN GOUDAS

Care to take any bets the General Hospital's fun-loving, well-to-do Tracy Quartermine won't outsmart conniving, money-loving Mitch Williams?

Nervy Tracy survived a jolt to the old ego this fall when, just prior to their nuptial ceremony, she discovered Mitch in bed with Susan Moore.

But, instead of wailing and running for cover, Tracy simply ordered the groom to dress for the wedding, and the sheepish fellow pulled his pants on.

This winter, Mitch is hitting wife Tracy for a suitable financial agreement before bowing out, suitable for Mitch that is. Tracy is not about to comply or be fleeced. Mitch has picked a formidable adversary for his plucking methods. Tracy may be outsmarted once — but never twice!

Thus Jane Elliott faces a lively winter on camera for General Hospital as Tracy Quartermaine Williams a lady of substance, so eager to taste life she refuses to hide behind financial security. Proving she can take hard knocks and bounce right back, the character of Tracy appears to be held in high regard by the show's mastermind, Gloria Monty, so Jane Elliott won't have time for outside guest shots.

After striking out on NBC's series Rosetti and Ryan, Jane read for producer Monty, but failed to land a role. However, the producer was impressed, and when Tracy Quartermaine was concocted, Jane got a phone call.

Ms. Elliott believes Tracy Quartermaine is bringing out the best in the Elliott bag of tricks. She envies the lady a bit because, "Tracy does everything you ever thought, wished or dreamed of doing, but never had the nerve to do."

Channel Chatter: New Searchers: Breon Gorman has recently joined Search for Tomorrow in the role of Allison Snowden. Besides doing a great deal of theater, Breon was Tessa Saxton for 10 months on For Richer, For Poorer, but most recently played Ellen Snow on One Life to Live, so she's familiar to soap fans...

Peter Lownds also joins Search as Carlos, a member of the El Bargello terrorist group. In addition to roles on All My Children and Edge of Night, Peter appears in the currently, highly praised film Kramer vs. Kramer.

And last but hardly least is Biff McGuire, stage, film and TV veteran, in the Search role of Don McKay. Biff's TV career dates back 30 years with an appearance on NBC's Tele-Theater in 1950.

Ann Williams (Margo Huntington Dorn on Edge of Night) has been recently written out of the soap. Miss Williams said, "I'm really very sorry to be leaving, this has been the most wonderful two years of work I've ever had." Miss Williams, who for 11 years prior to Edge was Joanne Vincente's sister Eunice in Search for Tomorrow, is planning to relax and maybe do a little traveling. However, she would love to do another soap. Meantime she will polish her golf game and play in the invitational tournament at Bermuda's Mid-Ocean Club in April. She boasts a handicap of 12.

Plot Portents: Linda is desperate on Datys of Our Lives. She realizes her marriage to Bob is finished after the fake pregnancy. Meanwhile, Phyllis has not given up on Alex Marshall despite his coldness.

Lorie realizes Lance needs a new interest on The Young and the Restless,)nd may attempt to outfox Vanessa to get Lance's job back. Wily Kay appears in the cat bird seat again, toying with Derek, ad blonde Leslie is having a ball in New York, attracting admirers.

Roger decides he can't take Rita with him on Guiding Light, and she lashes out at him in anger. Hillary wonders if she is making another emotional mistake with Floyd Parker. Meanwhile Justin's anger continues to grow.

A loose heel on Delia's shoe becomes very important on Ryan's Hope. Frank negotiates an important deal for Kim and Delia also makes great progress with Albert.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BROWN - Fanny M.
Nana left us on Feb. 12, 1976
Remembered by her husband David M., and her daughter Shirley, family, Sonny, Jim, Tony, John, Caroline, Gregory and Rob.

COOPER - In loving memory of George L. Cooper, our dad, grandfather and great-grandfather who left us suddenly on Feb. 7, 1977.

We often sit and think of him,
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.

Sadly missed by Jim, Ardyth, Sandy, Greg Cooper and Dwayne.

HAYES - In loving memory of Stephen, who passed away Feb. 8, 1979.
You will always be remembered and loved.
Nick, Karen, Sean & Steve.

MITCHELL - In loving memory of a dear son, Allan, February 8, 1979.

O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
The joys we shared together
Are the memories we hold dear,
And the happiness you gave us
Keeps you forever near.
You never really left us
Nor have you travelled far,
Just entered God's beautiful garden

Sadly missed Mother and Stuart and family.

Sharpe, Ron — Our dear husband and father who left us so suddenly on February 8, 1979. Sadly missed and dearly loved by wife Vi, daughter Lisa and sons Robert, Ron and Shawn.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Sleep on dear good mother,
long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

Dwarf perennials give big enjoyment

Dwarf varieties of perennials have always been in demand here on the coast for windy shoreline gardens and other open spots.

Fortunately there have been plenty to choose from during the years, with one or two introductions appearing annually. One brought to my attention recently by a reader is a dwarf strain of delphiniums called Blue Fountains, apparently bred from the Pacific Giants.

Although listed as 24-inch plants, my correspondent had them reach to about four feet. Perhaps they could be kept lower by wider spacing and a "leaner" soil. The colors were all pleasing shades of blue, and one creamy white with black bee. Seed is available through some catalogs.

The dwarf forms of dahlias, 12 to 15 inches, easy to grow from seed, have been around for 30 years or more, perfect for windy borders, balcony tubs, patios. Colors are lovely and the plants bloom continuously from May until frost. Tubers form by the time the first flowers open in May, from seeds sown indoors (greenhouse or sunporch) by the end of February. Tubers can be stored for winter, but the plants are not so bushy and satisfactory as are the first year plants from seed.

Local gladiolus shows feature classes with dwarf or miniature spikes around 15 inches, especially good for small flower arrangements and equally useful in border groups for the open without staking. Florets are smaller, often attractively ruffled and colors delightful.

Perennial asters also have dwarf cushion types suited to open windy situations. In the days when several local nurseries were specializing in collections of perennials, a dozen or more dwarfs up to 12 or 15 inches were listed. Today it would need a close combing of growers to find even three varieties. Pink, mauve, red and white were colors available. These cannot be grown from seed, but propagation by divisions and cuttings keep the stock true to original named varieties.

Other favorite dwarf perennials that should be re-introduced are the sticky Lychnis viscaria, a deep rich pink spike of blossoms on a 10-inch stem. It went well with perennial Candytuft, Iberis sempervirens, with its chalky white little flat heads of flowers at about eight inches and a nice rounded plant of good green foliage.

I recall one visitor who thought this pink Lychnis looked "lovely" with Heuchera sanguinea which had dainty coral bells on 12-inch stems; so don't be led astray by one person's opinion of a plant.

In early spring we see dwarf varieties of daffodils and other narcissi flourishing in windy pockets of rock gardens by the sea, and later the dwarf tulips most of them admittedly needing a bit of shelter for their wider petals.

There is a ground-hugging early named Tulipa tarda, in a gold and creamy white blend. It becomes a favorite one known. Another early is the whole Kaufmanniana group of tulips; they are only six to eight inches tall, but blossoms are of regular tulip size. With slight protection of shrubs on windward side, they are perfect for early bloom.

Tulips, like crocuses, have the protective habit of closing their blossoms when a cold or cool wind strikes them. Thus they last a surprisingly long time in spring gardens. This is an interesting habit to observe as a cloud passes momentarily over the sun while the bulbs are open. They respond within seconds, again opening after the cloud has passed.

Personal searching and inquiry at various nurseries which advertise perennial plants during the next weeks will reveal what is available. Not every plant grown can be advertised, for a grower may have only a dozen or so, but is just as ready to sell those as the hundred or so of a kind that is advertised.

So for desirable dwarf plants for windy gardens, seek them out this spring, and enjoy them for years to come.

Unionism growing in B.C.

A total of 465,980 workers in B.C. — 45.5 per cent of the work force — are members of trade unions, the labor ministry reported.

This is an increase of 3.4 per cent from the 1978 total of 450,802, the ministry's research and planning branch said.

Largest union in the province is the International Woodworkers of America with 51,008 members.

The branch also found that women union members increased six per cent to 139,973, 35 per cent of the estimated 400,000 women workers in the province.

It said that 52.2 per cent of the 624,000 male workers are unionized.

OTTAWA (CP) — The War Amputations of Canada has wrestled a $65-a-month allowance increase from the government with a ruling by the Federal Court of Appeal.

War Amps president Jim Jenkinson said the ruling will raise the monthly exceptional incapacity allowances of 2,300 disabled veterans to $195 from $130.

Those receiving this in addition to their base monthly pensions of $739 include those afflicted with total blindness, paraplegia and other serious war-related disabilities.

The decision was handed down Jan. 25 by Mr. Justice J. Urie. War Amps took the federal pension commission to court over its interpretation of the allowance regulations, passed in 1971 as an amendment to the Pension Act.

Northern Tier pipeline, hydro brownouts linked

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — An electric utility watchdog group claims pumping oil through a pipeline from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn., would require enough power to supply 150,000 homes.

James Lazar, an energy economist for Fair Electric Rates Now, said Thursday the 1,500-mile pipeline proposed by Northern Tier Pipeline Co. would drain already short energy supplies, raise electric rates and possibly cause brownouts and cost jobs.

In Clallam County, where the proposed pipeline would originate, Northern Tier's required power would cost $4.1 million a year, Lazar has calculated. But the public utility district already has decided that Northern Tier would pay the full cost of the extra electricity.

Fair Electric Rates Now is a group of consumers that monitors the state's electric rates.

Lazar's figures on power needs, which were taken from the environmental impact statement made for Northern Tier's application to Washington state to build its pipeline, were confirmed by company spokesman Bill Sage.

"We're being asked to share our cheap hydropower (with Northern Tier) to pump oil to the Middle West for them to use in their motor homes and snowmobiles," said Lazar.

The cost to ratepayers of just one utility — Puget Sound Power and Light Co. — will be $11.5 million a year, Lazar said:

"That's about $23 per ratepayer for Puget's 500,000 customers," he said.

Puget Power recently asked the state for permission to refuse new electric hookups to homes and businesses because of a shortage of electricity.

Whether or not Northern Tier pays the full cost of the extra power it needs, Lazar said, the current power shortage will be made worse by he pipeline.

"Some factory will close down," he said. "Some people are going to lose jobs."

Richard Swartzell and David Knight, Puget Power vice-presidents, acknowledged the cost of either buying or producing new power to supply Northern Tier will be shared by ratepayers. But they said they did not know where the power for the pipeline would come from.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Getty Oil Co. has acquired an indirect interest in Northern Tier Pipeline Co., which has proposed building a $1.6 billion port and pipeline to carry Alaskan crude to the Midwest.

A Getty spokesman in Los Angeles confirmed Thursday that two weeks ago, Getty, a major oil producer, bought Reserve Oil and Gas Co. of Denver, which owns Western Crude Oil Inc., also of Denver. Western Crude owns a 13 per cent equity share of Northern Tier, based in Billings, Mont.

While the Getty spokesman confirmed completion of the acquisition, he contended Northern Tier's project was not a major factor in the decision to buy Reserve Oil and Gas.

The spokesman also denied that President Jimmy Carter's endorsement of the Northern Tier proposal on Jan. 17 was the reason for an eight-day delay in Getty's acquisition of Reserve.

Getty produces crude oil in California, the Persian Gulf and Indonesia and controls a fraction of the Prudhoe Bay oil field on Alaska's North Slope. Getty also owns refineries in Kansas, Delaware and California.

The oil company has not yet decided whether to ship crude oil through Northern Tier's proposed pipeline, the Getty spokesman said.

A Northern Tier representative in Seattle said she was not familiar with Getty's participation in its project.

Poll says Britons want Charles III by '86 at latest

LONDON (Reuter) — Most Britons believe Queen Elizabeth should abdicate within the decade and allow Prince Charles to become king, an opinion poll published Thursday says.

Seven out of every 10 people asked by the newsmagazine Now said the Queen eventually should stand down. Many were in favor of her abdicating in 1986 when she will be aged 60.

Only one person in 10 believed the Queen, crowned in 1953, should abdicate immediately.

Five months ago, a national poll showed that 40 per cent of the population believed the Queen should give up her throne.

The change in public opinion is apparently due to the growing popularity of 31-year-old Prince Charles. He was the most popular member of the royal family with 70 per cent of the votes.

The poll showed that most Britons are fiercely loyal to the monarch and believe Queen Elizabeth does a great job for the country.

The only criticism was that the Royal Family was too aloof, with nearly half of those asked saying the family should spend more time with ordinary people.

Hanoi war hero demoted in big shuffle

GIAP . . . "red Napoleon"

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnam has fired defence minister Vo Nguyen Giap — the military strategist credited with driving French and American troops out of Indochina in two separate wars — foreign minister Nguyen Duy Trinh and several other officials, Hanoi announced Thursday.

The official Vietnam News Agency, in a dispatch monitored here, announced the sweeping changes made by President Ton Duc Thang, but gave no reasons for the house-cleaning.

However, Indochina analysts of the situation said the causes were likely inefficiency, old age and poor health rather than policy matters, adding that those in power in Hanoi were dissatisfied with performance in certain sectors of the government and Communist party:

"Instead of changing polices they've changed the men."

The hierarchy had remained virtually unchanged for decades.

Giap and Trinh retained their positions as deputy premiers, the agency said.

The news agency said the actions were taken on a decision by the permanent committee of the national assembly.

Hanoi also announced these other changes:

— Gen. Van Tien Dung, architect of the 1975 Communist victory in South Vietnam, was named minister of national defence, succeeding Giap.

— Nguyen Co Thach was named foreign minister, replacing Trinh.

— Le Thanh Nghi, deputy prime minister and chairman of the state planning committee, was relieved of the post of committee chairman. His deputy, Nguyen Lam, was named committee chairman and a deputy premier.

— Tran Quoc Hoan was relieved from the key interior ministry post and replaced by Deputy Premier Pham Hung, a former Viet Cong leader who holds the number four spot in the ruling politburo.

— Two new deputy premiers were appointed, bringing their number to nine.

Giap, believed to be 67 or 69 years old, was the arch-enemy of two world powers. He fought against superior forces and won in the 1947-54 war against the French. He was described as the author of the 1968 Tet offensive, a turning point in the Vietnam war that led to the withdawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

An observer once said of Giap: "He has lost many battles but never a war." Others called him "the red Napoleon" and "the volcano topped with ice" because of his stern appearance.

Giap built North Vietnam's armed forces from a band of poorly armed peasants in the mountains through eight years of war with the French and a decade-long confrontation with the military clout of the United States.

Muldoon tells Moscow to quit funding leftists

WELLINGTON (AP) — The government announced today it will order the size of the Soviet embassy staff reduced to eight persons from 31 if there is any further Soviet funding of a local leftist party.

Soviet ambassador Vselovod Sofinsky was expelled Jan. 24 on charges that he supplied substantial funds to the small Moscow-oriented Socialist Unity Party.

Prime Minister Robert Muldoon said the embassy's charge d'affaires has been told such behavior on the part of any other embassy staff member would be equally unacceptable.

"If the government finds out that the Soviet Embassy is still being used as a channel for the passing of funds to the SUP — Socialist Unity Party — further action becomes inevitable," he said. "We will cut back the number of permits for personnel from 31 to that of the New Zealand mission in Moscow — eight at present."

Muldoon said his government also told the Soviet Union it regards the expulsion from Moscow of New Zealand's ambassador, James Weir, to be without justification.

He added that New Zealand regards the book as closed on the incident and will look forward to an exchange of ambassadors when the time is right.

Tokyo stop eyed by China

TOKYO (AP) — China is seeking permission for its airliners to stop in Tokyo en route from Peking to Washington, transport ministry officials said. Japanese aviation industry sources said China apparently wants to get in on the profitable Japan-U.S. traffic.

Soviets jig fleet in Afghan wake

Times News Services

TOKYO — A large force of Soviet warships is concentrating in the South China Sea in a move linked with the Afghanistan crisis, Western military sources said Thursday.

They said a 10-ship group, the most powerful Soviet navy formation ever sighted in northeast Asia, has been steaming in the Pacific toward the Bashi Channel between Taiwan and the Philippines. They said it would enter the South China Sea shortly.

The force includes a Kresta missile cruiser, a Krivak missile destroyer, frigates, minesweepers and support ships. It comes from the Soviet Red Banner Pacific Fleet headquartered at Vladivostok and passed along the northern coast of Japan on its way to Southeast Asian waters.

The sources said the group would be joining a five-ship Soviet force — three fighting vessels and two support ships — which has been in the South China Sea for some days.

Together, the two groups would be more numerous than the number of Soviet warships in the area during the Chinese invasion of northern Vietnam a year ago.

The sources said some of the ships were probably bound for the Indian Ocean or the Arabian Sea, where 55 Soviet and U.S. warships have gathered following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The U.S. Seventh Fleet is concentrated in the Indian Ocean and adjacent seas because of the Iranian and Afghan crises and its presence in the Western Pacific has been drastically reduced.

The Western military sources said the U.S. now has 27 ships in the Indian Ocean and adjacent seas. Including the five-ship Middle East group based in the Persian Gulf, there are 18 fighting vessels and nine support ships.

The Soviets have 28 ships, including 10 combat vessels, in the vicinity of the Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean.

Latest reports from Afghanistan say rebel snipers have killed about 40 Soviet soldiers in the streets of a provincial capital in Afghanistan's far north, and hundreds of Afghan troops have deserted their government's cause in the area.

The rebels still hold the Takhar towns of Rustaq, Chah Ab, Bangi and Worsaj, which surround Taloqan, and they control an important salt mine, causing a shortage of salt in Kabul.

The Soviets have been pouring supplies into Afghanistan in anticipation of a broadened rebel attacks when the snow melts.

In related developments:

— U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance is scheduled to meet West European foreign ministers in Bonn on Feb. 20 to discuss a co-ordinated response to Moscow's Afghan intervention.

— Japan has announced it will suspend any new credits for joint development projects in the Soviet Union in protest against the Afghanistan situation.

— North Korea and Romania are reported to have joined Yugoslavia in opposing the Kremlin.

Anti-Mugabe bombs burn family

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Attackers hurled gasoline bombs into the home of an official of of Robert Mugabe's party early today, severely burning the official, his wife and their three-month-old daughter.

A police spokesman said between three and five bombs were thrown through the bedroom and living room windows of the house of Mobile Chikwata.

He and his wife, Anna, were taken to hospital in serious condition, and their child suffered burns on 20 per cent of her legs, face and one arm.

The attack was the 11th in eight weeks on political figures as parties step up their campaigns for the Feb. 27-29 parliamentary elections that will establish black-majority rule and independence sanctioned by Britain.

Mugabe, a Marxist guerrilla leader who fought a seven-year war against white minority rule, escaped an apparent assassination attempt Wednesday when a grenade exploded outside the security wall around his residence.

Another official of his Zimbabwe African National Union party was severely injured in a separate attack the same day.

Mugabe blames irregular security force auxiliaries said to be loyal to Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa for the attacks on his officials.

A British source said Mugabe's charges had been investigated and that in all but one incident, it was determined that Muzorewa supporters were responsible.

Muzorewa has issued an appeal to his followers to resist taking any action against other parties even if there was provocation against them.

Rhine, Danube waters rising

BONN (AP) — Two of Europe's mightiest rivers, the Rhine and the Danube, are on the rampage, flooding many towns and threatening worse destruction. So far, however, no casualties have been reported.

Heavy rains and mild temperatures in the Alps melted snow and swelled the rivers and their tributaries during the last week, and more of the same weather was expected throughout most of West Germany today.

That spelled possible trouble for Cologne, a major industrial city with a population of about 850,000, where on Thursday the Rhine was only centimetres below the top of dikes in the old part of the city. Officials there said rising waters might spill into the commercial district today.

Fast-moving waters have already spilled over the banks and flooded many towns along the river, causing extensive property damage and forcing the evacuation of hundreds of homes.

Partially under water were such low-lying Rhine towns as Koenigswinter, Linz, Neuwied and Koblenz. Federal highways along the river's banks were closed because of high waters, officials said.

In Bonn, the West German capital, high waters lapped at the parliament building, flooding the building's riverside entrance and blocking streets by the river.

Etna stirring

CATANIA, Sicily (Reuter) — Light tremors today shook Mount Etna, Europe's most active volcano.

Explosions were felt along the slopes of the 3,322-metre mountain, but experts could not say whether an eruption was imminent.

Last September, nine people were killed when deposits of trapped gas exploded and spewed rocks and solidified lava onto dozens of horrified tourists.

To winch or not to winch is jumbo rub

LONDON (AP) — "How do you get a two-ton elephant out through a door if she doesn't want to go?" The Daily Mirror asked its millions of readers.

The letters flooded in from all over Britain, suggesting what to do about 12-year-old Dali, who for almost four years has refused to leave her eight-metre-by-six-metre stall at the Edinburgh Zoo.

Dali — rhymes with Haley — has had a thing about going out of doors ever since she arrived at the zoo in Scotland's capital in 1976.

She paces back and forth in her enclosure and at feeding time stretches her trunk just far enough to seize her dinner. But her back legs stay anchored safely inside the stall.

The keepers even called in a hypnotist but to no avail.

"A big animal with a big problem always strikes a chord in people's hearts," said the Mirror as it published some of the replies to its question.

First, there were the nasty remedies — hot potatoes or stinging nettles to her behind. But animal lovers would protest.

Women readers urged parading an "ardent" male elephant outside the stall to lure Dali out.

The zookeepers rejected all pleas for passion. They said Dali was too big and too unpredictable to take a chance on love.

Some readers worried about Dali's health. Was her sight failing? Her joints aching? Her sense of smell offended?

No, said the zoo.

How about a bucket of beer — which would get most Britons out in a hurry. Or a brass band? Not practical, said Dali's adopted parents.

Then the zoo needs a crane, a tractor, or a helicopter to get her out, readers wrote. "Or roller skates and push her out!" was the advice from Mrs. W. Taylor of London's Streatham district.

Miranda Stevenson, curator of the zoo, said one suggestion appears feasible — tranquillize Dali and winch her out.

"That is what we'll probably have to do," said the curator. "We'll try it when spring comes."

Women's draft means battle for Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today asked Congress to approve the mandatory military registration of American women and men aged 19 and 20 this year. Eighteen-year-olds would have to register beginning in 1981.

A bitter fight is expected in the House and Senate over the unprecedented U.S. registration of females even though Carter stipulated today that women must continue to be barred from combat.

About 8 million young people would be affected this year and another 4 million in the younger age group next year.

Carter asked Congress for $20 million to crank up the Selective Service System as part of a military buildup sparked by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He has stressed that he has not immediate intention of actually reinstating the draft. No American has been drafted since 1973 in the aftermath of the Vietnam War.

"There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance, that would allow me to exclude women from an obligation to register," Carter said in a statement on the registration move.

He added he had "no intention" of changing the policy that now keeps women from being assigned to units where they would be engaged in combat.

The mail registration proposal stipulates that all eligible Americans who are 18 now and turn 19 sometime during the year would have to register this year. Those who turn 18 this year would have to register when they turn 19 next year.

Top U.S. military officials and conservatives in Congress have charged that voluntary membership in the nation's armed services has left the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines woefully short in quantity and quality of fighting personnel.

Carter's action on the draft came as U.S. intelligence reported the Soviet Union has begun army movements on its border with northwestern Iran.

The significance of the movements is not clear, but U.S. policymakers are concerned about them, fearing possible military pressure on Iran or even an attack. Iran is within the Persian Gulf area that Carter on Jan. 23 told Congress is vital to U.S. interests. He said those interests will be defended "by any means necessary, including military force."

Asked today about the intelligence reports, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said, "Soviet units stationed along the northwest border of Iran are engaged in high levels of activity."

BIG LIFT followed big drop by car into building excavation at Cadboro Bay and Eastdowne early today. Oak Bay police said auto containing driver Malcolm Berge, 19, and passengers Murray Acton, 19, and Brian Whitehead, 21, was east on Cadboro when it hit utility pole, rammed through plywood fencing and plunged into foundation. Whitehead was treated for a head cut while other occupants escaped injury. Police said they were lucky — car was pierced by steel reinforcing rods which also punctured gas tank.

U.K. riot over abortion

LONDON (AP) — Police battled thousands of protesting women outside the House of Commons on today as MPs inside Parliament argued over tightening Britain's 13-year-old liberal abortion laws.

Police summoned reinforcements and forced a path through the demonstrators. Hundreds of women tried to block traffic outside the building.

A doorman was bitten on the hand as parliamentary officials evicted from the public gallery a group of young women who unfurled a banner declaring: "Women will not obey your bill," and interrupted the emotion-charged debate with shouts of: "A woman's right to choose."

A battle erupted when demonstrators who had gathered outside the nearby City Hall marched on Parliament when news of the evictions spread.

Women with children in their arms were carried along in the rush as police formed a chain to stop the demonstrators. The demonstrators, led by feminist organizations, forced their way into the building. Three women were arrested inside the House, police reported. There were more arrests outside.

MPs, debating restrictions which doctors say could halve the number of legal abortions performed, watched from windows of the Commons as women waved their fists and shouted: "Not the church, not the state, we must decide our fate."

The bill would limit the criteria used to determine when abortion is allowed, and would cut the time limit for abortions to 20 weeks from from 28.

Dragged by loco, she lives

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 17-year-old girl who was dragged 75 metres beneath the engine of a freight train in the southern part of the city has survived to tell the tale.

Sharon Marr of Winnipeg, in fair condition Thursday after suffering multiple fractures and internal injuries, was pinned beneath the undercarriage of a 200-ton engine for half an hour Wednesday night while fire and ambulance rescue crews worked to free her.

"They squeezed her out between the brake springs and the wheels," said a spokesman for the fire department rescue crew.

"She's damned lucky to be alive."

A spokesman for Canadian National Railways said the engine had to be rolled forward slightly to free one of the girl's feet caught under one of the wheels.

"If you know what I know it's a miracle," the railway employee said.

"There's no room for a person to go under that engine."

Police said the train conductor saw the girl on the track .. But the train couldn't be stopped in time.

Mackays have eye on summer trip

Puzzle winners a second time

Who says lightning doesn't strike twice?

Not Larry and Lillian MacKay, of 2703 Cedar Hill Road — winners for the second time in the popular Times' Prevue Payoff Puzzle.

The MacKays, who collected a cool $1,100 in their first win back in December, 1978, this time share a $900 jackpot with Doug Orchard, of 535 Strathdee Place, in Colwood.

"You're kidding," said a delighted MacKay when told he and his wife had won again.

"That's great news — thanks a million!"

The Mackays say they're hoping to take a summer trip and their $450 windfall — the result of a team approach to the puzzle — will come in mighty handy.

Orchard, who is a devotee of the puzzle since way back, according to his wife, has often come close in the past with only one or two wrong answers

Mrs. Orchard said her husband, who was out of town working when the family got the good news, sends in one entry for every puzzle.

Any plans for the money?

"It'll go to pay bills," cracks Mrs. Orchard.

Firms deny lighter 'bomb'

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for the three largest manufacturers of disposable and butane lighters said Thursday the recent controversy over their safety is exaggerated.

However, Elizabeth Nielsen, a spokesman for the federal consumer affairs department product safety branch, said regulations governing safety performance standards will come into effect in November and should eliminate problems with malfunctioning lighters.

She said lighters should not be taken into areas exposed to high temperatures or where welding is done or hot metals are used.

The manufacturers' spokesmen were commenting on reports that Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. in Kitimat has banned employees from having such lighters while in the smelter.

Stuart Saunders, manager of corporate and public relations with Gillette in Boston, said many reports of accidents caused by lighters are hoaxes.

"I have a file a foot thick, and nowhere in there is there anything to say an accident has actually taken place."

Saunders said that last month the occupational safety and health administration of the U.S. labor department retracted a memorandum it issued last May after an investigation showed two alleged lighter accidents involving welders with the Union Pacific Railroad never actually happened.

Allan Scott, spokesman for Bic, which sells 30 million disposable lighters in Canada each year, said the company has settled seven consumer complaints in four years. None of those were for lighters that exploded.

Cabbie slugged

A cab driver slugged and robbed early today is in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital with a broken nose and cheekbone.

Driver Claus Hellmodt, 56, of Victoria Taxi, was robbed of $80-$100 when jumped about 6 a.m.

Police said Hellmodt responded to a call to the 600-block Moss where a man was waiting.

Instead of getting into the car the man attacked and robbed him.

His assailant stole the cab and drove south. Police recovered it later at the Sir James Douglas schoolground.

We're off and kneeling on the big bloom binge

They were off and running today, well, down on their knees and counting, as Victoria's fifth annual flower count started.

"We were surprised and delighted by the large total," project co-ordinator Carmela Costigan said.

"I had expected a slow start this year because the weather has not been cooperating. And my heart sank when it started to drizzle for awhile this morning.

"Now the weather outlook is good."

This morning's totals included daffodils, snowdrops, crocuses and heather.

"I checked Government House this morning and they have a large number of flowers. There are fewer than usual in Beacon Hill Park but I hear that Butchart's has plenty, probably a million."

Special teams will count at Butchart's, Beacon Hill Park, University of Victoria and other large areas.

Daffodils were sent this morning to Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving with the request that he ask his staff to count the blooms. Daffodils also went out to all local mayors, to Tourism Minister Pat Jordan and local newspapers and TV and radio stations.

Residents are being asked to count only those flowers blooming outdoors on their own property. The flower count line is 381-5315 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Leaders' energy slips fuel for quips

Times News Services

A "slip of the tongue" by Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau who indicated oil prices would rise by less than $3 a barrel this year if his party wins the Feb. 18 election had his officials scrambling and Prime Minister Clark laughing Thursday.

But it was the Liberals' turn to chuckle today when, during his weekly press conference, Clark today came up with something that sounded like "gasoline rationing if necessary but not necessarily gasoline rationing."

Trudeau's statement in a television interview caused a stir because the former prime minister has refused repeatedly during the campaign to say precisely how much oil prices would rise under a Liberal government. He has, however, pledged to keep it below the $4 increase proposed by the Progressive Conservatives.

His statement was at first denied by disbelieving aides during a campaign stop in Prince George. But they checked the tape of the interview and consulted Trudeau before announcing it was a slip of the tongue.

The aides said the former prime minister was referring to the $3 that is left of the $4 Tory proposal following the $1 increase imposed Jan. 1.

Clark quickly picked up on the mini-controversy, fuelled by varying statements of senior Liberals elsewhere on what the price would be if they win the election.

The prime minister contrasted Trudeau's "slip" with statements by Liberal energy critic Marc Lalonde, who stuck by the less-than-$4 figure during a speech in Saskatoon; former Liberal finance minister Jean Chretien, who said in Winnipeg the increase likely will be $3 to $3.50, and John Reid, former federal-provincial relations minister, who said last week the price would go up by at least $4.

At a election rally in Thunder Bay, he used the conflict to mock the Liberal "team approach."

Confusion in the Liberal ranks about oil pricing illustrates they can't even "explain it to themselves," let alone to other Canadians, Clark said.

Clark said it seemed the Liberals had four official spokesmen contradicting each other on energy pricing.

When the topic of energy was raised at the prime minister's weekly press conference held in Winnipeg today, the question of gasoline rationing proved a bit of a hot one.

Clark, who for weeks was been warning Canadians the Trudeau Liberals would bring in gas rationing if returned to office Feb. 18, ack-

Iran power shift sparks hope

Times News Services

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr secured strong new powers today and there were growing indications he would use them to move for the release of 50 American hostages now in their 97th day of captivity.

He promptly took another slap at the hostages' militant Moslem captors, declaring Islam was not superior to Christianity or Judaism and appealing for "civilized values." He also received pledges of support from the Iranian air force.

Bani-Sadr's growing consolidation of power within a week of being sworn into office has resulted in a gradual erosion in the position of the militants and raised hopes at the United Nations and in Washington a settlement to free the Americans may be near.

An official statement said Bani-Sadr was appointed head of the Revolutionary Council Thursday night, "with the consent of the Imam (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini)."

He will have full executive powers over the Revolutionary Council and government ministers "to harmonize proceedings," Tehran radio quoted council spokesman Hasan Habibi as saying — apparently a fiat to run the country under the guidance of Khomeini.

Previously the Western-educated Bani-Sadr was only acting head of the council with no power over its ministers.

In Washington, meanwhile, a subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives unanimously approved legislation authorizing the striking of a gold medal honoring Kenneth Taylor, the Canadian ambassador who helped spirit six Americans from Iran.

The bill honoring Taylor will go directly to the House floor for a vote Monday.

Representative Daniel Akaka (Dem. Hawaii) told the subcommittee that Taylor should be honored because of his courage in hiding the six American diplomats after the U.S. Embassy in Iran was taken over by Iranian militants.

The House and Senate earlier approved resolutions praising Taylor and the Canadian government for helping the six to escape. The bill to strike a gold medal for the ambassador has 160 co-sponsors.

The bill also authorizes the striking of bronze duplicates of Taylor's gold medal. These duplicates will be sold to the public.

In other developments:

— The hostages were visited Friday and found to be in good condition by the ayatollah's son, Ahmand, and a Palestinian archbishop, Radio Tehran reported.

— At least two of the hostages were allowed to telephone home and one said she was "in great spirits and very cheerful."

— Five people, including a general, were executed by firing squad in Iran after an Islamic revolutionary tribunal found them guilty of offences ranging from killing innocent demonstrators to torture and rape, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

— New Zealand closed its embassy in Iran and all its diplomats were leaving the country following a break-in at the embassy chancery in which documents were stolen.

— The ayatollah left his hospital bed today to greet several hundred foreign guests invited to Iran to celebrate the first anniversary of the Islamic revolution. He appeared weak and spoke barely above a whisper.

Admirals Road building sparks curiosity: owner incorporates childhood home

Drivers going along Admirals Road just south of Naden see what appears to be a 1940s vintage grey stucco house, cut in half horizontally, with a partially finished new building on top of it. Then, about twelve feet away is another building in progress, which is joined by a walkway to the first one.

Unusual to say the least, and Admirals Road drivers are intrigued as to what is going on here. Is it an apartment complex, or can it be a private dwelling? How do you cut a house in half, and why would you ?

When the owner/builder found the house he had grown up in was to fall beneath the wrecker's bar, he, being, as he put it, "a sentimental slob", bought the house, had it moved to his Admirals Road lot, and decided to incorporate it into a large new home.

The finished house will be 5,000 sq. feet, with a two-storey glass-walled arboretum or conservatory in the middle; a house whose interesting and unique plan was the outcome of trying to solve a design problem.

The problem was that building on to the side of the original house would block the windows on that side of it.

The creative solution?

Build next to the original house, put a cross-walk from the upper level , where bedrooms, den/library, and sewing room will be to the games room above the double garage. Put railings on the cross-walk and down the steps, and you have a truly unique floor plan and ensueing traffic flow that might never have been conceived had there not been a problem which needed a solution.

The owner says he will reap additional practical benefits by getting a lot of passive solar heat from the glassed-in roof on the conservatory.

Asked if it was cheaper to build around an old house than it was to start from scratch, the owner says he doesn't know, and won't until he's finished. He had hoped to save the interior of the original, but rain got in during construction and consequently ceilings will all have to be re-done.

How do you cut a house in half ? "The same way it was built" he said, "piece by piece".

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Here's a modern, double-duty desk that will delight any member of the family. With the lid down, the big 26"x48" top makes a perfect place to spread out paperwork. Then, presto! You may lift the top, and inside there's a sturdy plywood-hardboard workbench. Here you can build a model, sew or work on any one of dozens of hobbies. When the hobby session is over, tools and other equipment need not be put away. Just leave everything where it is, pull down the top and lock it. There's no clutter in sight.

The practicality of this unit is matched by its good looks. Its handsome appearance is mainly due to the use of Finished Paneling. This material is ready to use without painting.

In addition to the work surface, there is a deep trough in the back to hold longer tools, all neatly arranged and hung on pegboard hooks. The three drawers (the bottom one is extra deep) will hold books, stationery and all sorts of items that any member of the family might collect. The easy-to-follow pattern gives step-by-step directions and illustrations showing each stage of construction. It's a project that any amateur can handle without difficulty. To obtain the desk/workbench pattern number 498, please send $3.00 (add fifty cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to: U-Build Patterns, Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal, Quebec. H4V 2Y3.

Realtors tell how to help your home sell

By HERB LAWRENCE

You may love your home, but how do you make prospective buyers fall in love with it?

"People buy houses for emotional reasons, and while fixing that leaky kitchen faucet, that crack in the bedroom ceiling, the loose doorknobs will help, put your fix-up money and time where it will show" says Gloria McCleave of Block Bros Realty. She is not implying that you mis-represent or cover up, but she says a leaky tap or a broken doorknob isn't going to stop a house from selling if people find it appealing.

By all means clean up the garage and other storage areas, wash windows, shampoo the carpets and clean the upholstery, clean out closets and arrange items neatly, cut the grass, weed the garden. They all help to create the total impression.

If you have advance notice that the house is to be shown to a possible buyer, prepare for the visit, realtors suggest. Remove all clutter and make sure the kiddies are out of the way so that the house will feel uncrowded.

It is also suggested that the home seller:

Not to be around when a prospective buyer looks around the house.

They may feel uncomfortable if there are too many people around or if they feel they're being "followed."

Paint or wallpaper for a clean, character look.

Perhaps have bread baking for a delicious aroma.

Have soft music playing.

If you have a dog, make sure it doesn't interfere.

Generally, improvements do help sell. They include such changes as modernizing the kitchen, remodeling old-fashioned bathrooms, addition of air conditioning, better landscaping and adding a den.

Things such as new draperies, carpets and good fencing also can help to "sell" a house faster.

"Really, you are playing cupid when you sell your house" says Robin Estlin of Sunrise Realty. "You can't make people fall in love with a house any more than you can force someone to love a person. But the right atmosphere, a little attention to details helps to set the mood for an affair of the heart". A sales agent can screen prospects to separate the browsers from the buyers, stress the strong points and minimize the weak points of your home, plus handling the legal and financial aspects of the sale.

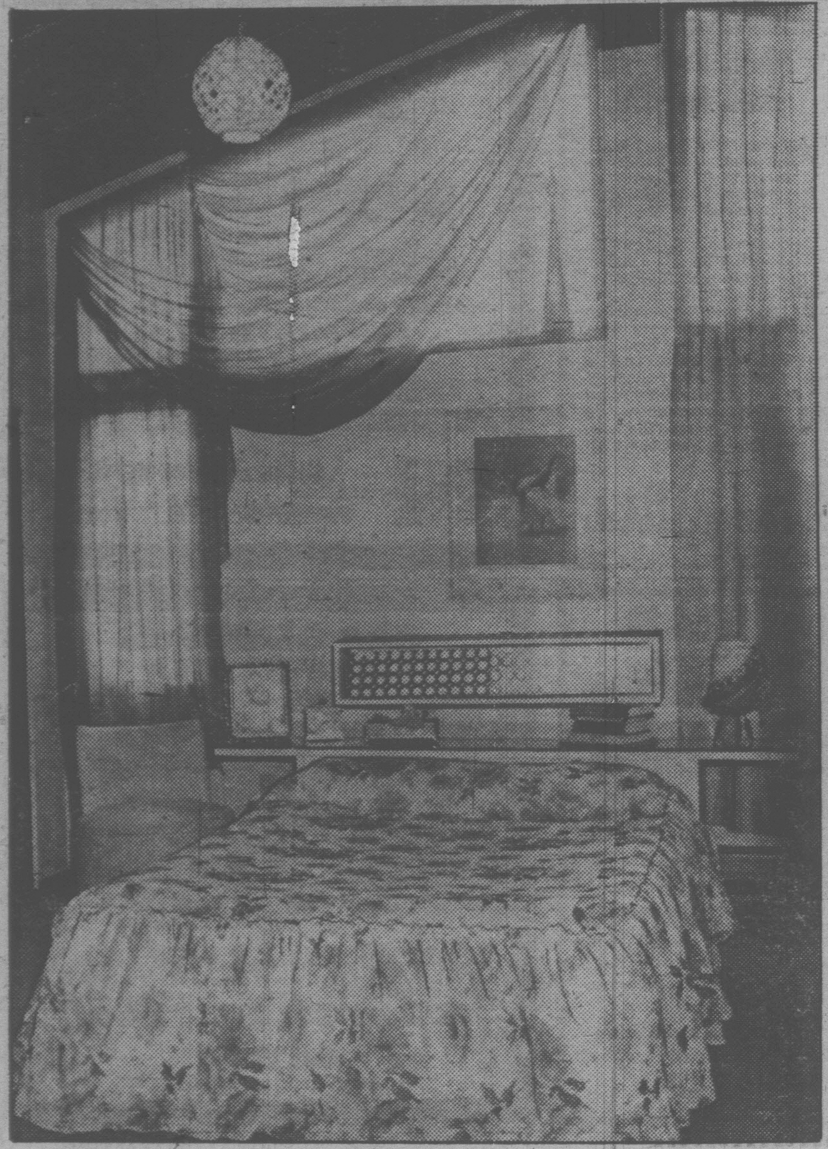
Bebe Eversfield's stage background influences her home's plan, decor

By ANNE SWANNELL

Bebe's theatrical training and background are reflected in the the way space in her home is utilized like a multi-set stage,and in the way she uses color.

A look around the house shows she has the choreographer's eye for line and proportion that comes from years of critical appraisal and from close involvement with glamorous visual presentations.

"The draftswoman who drew up the plans for this house fourteen years ago said it was too avante garde, too far ahead of its time" says Bebe.



SCHEHEREZADE EFFECT in bedroom is achieved by variegated mauve chiffon which drapes windows. Bedspread is mauve and hot pink. Adjoining this room is a huge walk-in dressing room, fitted out with shelves for jewelry and racks for shoes.

When the house was in the planning stage, she wanted the bedrooms on the lower level, the living areas of the house on the second floor, and that's the way the house was built, on a rocky promontory between Naden and Saxe Point.

She adds "To tell the truth, with four boys, I had spent quite enough time with them above me. I thought it was time I lived above them. The view being better from the upper floor was only added impetus to design the house with adult-oriented space on one level, and child oriented space on the other."

The upper floor consists of living room, dining room, kitchen and family/TV room, one bedroom and a bathroom. The lower floor comprises an outside entrance with a huge sports equipment cupboard right beside it, a recreation area and three bedrooms. It seems a very practical, very liveable concept for a family of teenagers.

"Anybody with a view lot who's planning a house should think about this kind of a set up" Bebe advises.

The space downstairs is very flexible, and is in fact used like a multiple-set stage, with constant scene changes possible. Bebe has had steel I-beam track put up at one end of the recreation area, and has hung brightly coloured curtains from it. With them drawn, the curtained-off space becomes a private bedroom for a guest, with them open the space is a reading place, a sitting-and-talking-place.

Both upstairs and downstairs, the bath and washbasin are separate from the toilet, which is in its own room with its own door. "That just doubles

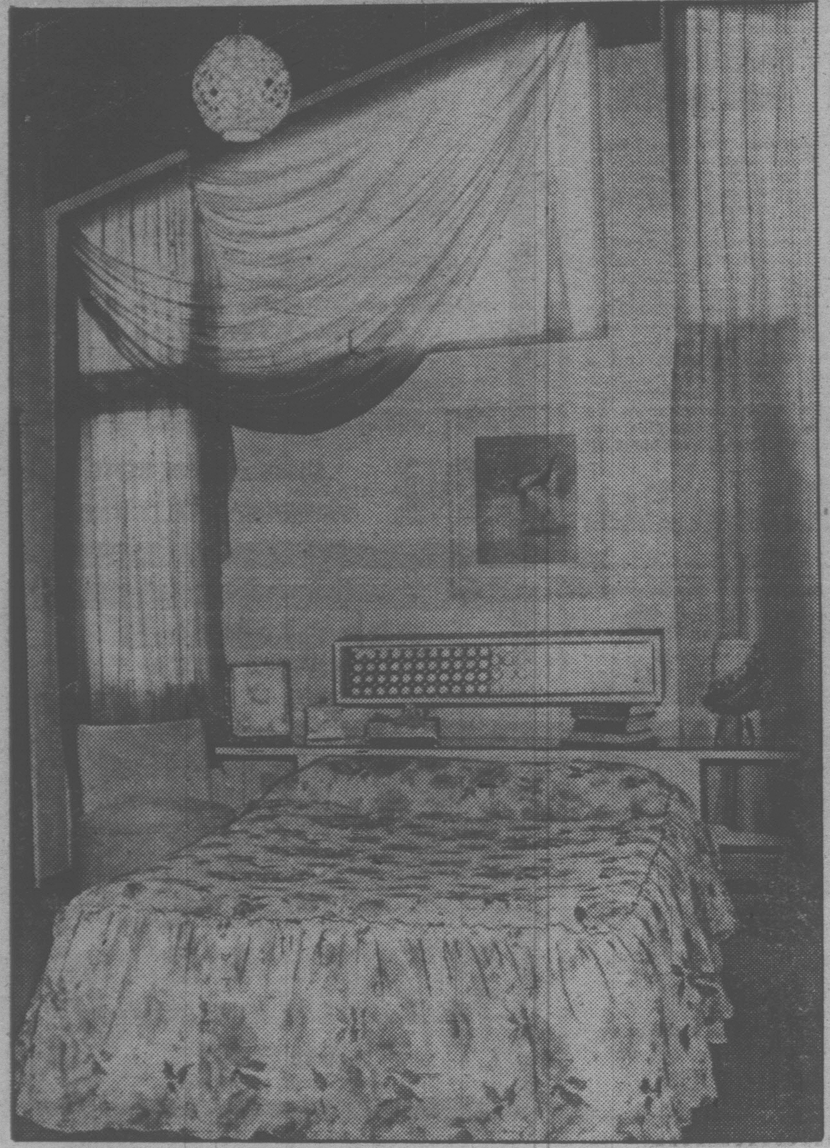
Bebe Eversfield's stage background influences her home's plan, decor

By ANNE SWANNELL

Bebe's theatrical training and background are reflected in the the way space in her home is utilized like a multi-set stage, and in the way she uses color.

A look around the house shows she has the choreographer's eye for line and proportion that comes from years of critical appraisal and from close involvement with glamorous visual presentations.

"The draftswoman who drew up the plans for this house fourteen years ago said it was too avante garde, too far ahead of its time" says Bebe.



SCHEHEREZADE EFFECT in bedroom is achieved by variegated mauve chiffon which drapes windows. Bedspread is mauve and hot pink. Adjoining this room is a huge walk-in dressing room, fitted out with shelves for jewelry and racks for shoes.

When the house was in the planning stage, she wanted the bedrooms on the lower level, the living areas of the house on the second floor, and that's the way the house was built, on a rocky promontory between Naden and Saxe Point.

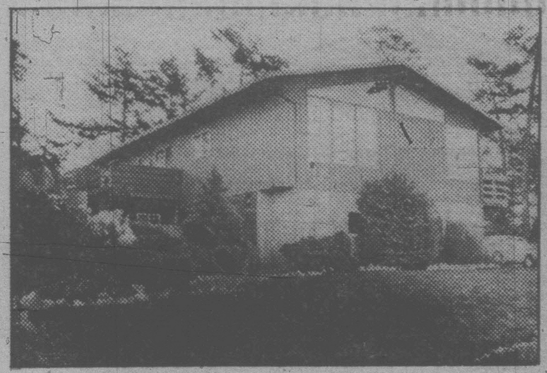
She adds "To tell the truth, with four boys, I had spent quite enough time with them above me. I thought it was time I lived above them. The view being better from the upper floor was only added impetus to design the house with adult-oriented space on one level, and child oriented space on the other."

The upper floor consists of living room, dining room, kitchen and family/TV room, one bedroom and a bathroom. The lower floor comprises an outside entrance with a huge sports equipment cupboard right beside it, a recreation area and three bedrooms. It seems a very practical, very liveable concept for a family of teenagers.

"Anybody with a view lot who's planning a house should think about this kind of a set up" Bebe advises.

The space downstairs is very flexible, and is in fact used like a multiple-set stage, with constant scene changes possible. Bebe has had steel I-beam track put up at one end of the recreation area, and has hung brightly coloured curtains from it. With them drawn, the curtained-off space becomes a private bedroom for a guest, with them open the space is a reading place, a sitting-and-talking-place.

Both upstairs and downstairs, the bath and washbasin are separate from the toilet, which is in its own room with its own door. "That just doubles the usefulness of those rooms when you've got a big family" says Bebe.



The house has a sundeck off the family room, which is used a lot for entertaining in the summer, and another deck that runs across the living-room side of the house. This one takes advantage of the beautiful west-facing view over Brother Islands to The Sooke Hills.

"We get marvelous sunset skies here, and when a storm is coming in over the hills, we have box seats for the show" says Bebe, ever conscious of the performing arts. (She was a prima ballerina in New Zealand, and in England before coming to Victoria).

An interesting design feature of the entry hall is that its slate floor carries on around the fireplace to form the hearth, while two carpeted steps down from it take you into the living room. To the right of the fireplace is a built in stereo centre behind eye level sliding doors.

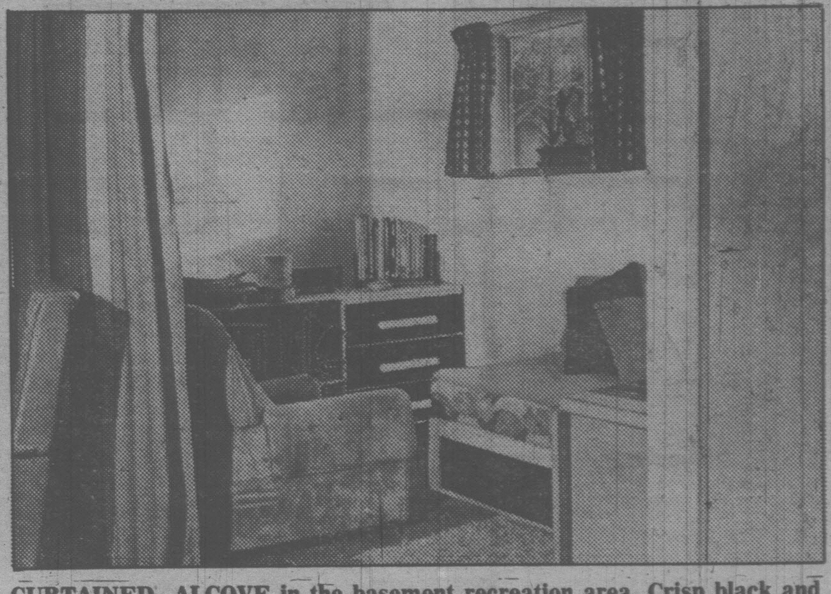
The dining room's theme is Oriental. Paired Buddha figures pattern the beige-tone wallpaper, red drapes, and deep purple rug frame glossy black furniture.

There is humour here, too. Four crystal decanters stand on a divider between living and dining rooms. Three are elegant and upright. The fourth, bought later, staggers at a drunken angle, as though viewed by someone who had drained the first three.

Bebe has created what she calls a "Scheherezade effect" in her bedroom, by draping various shaded mauve chiffon over the skylights.

APRICOT, GOLD, SOFT GREEN are colors in kitchen. Table-height counter top divides it from family room, is useful for breakfast, family meals as well as food preparation. Bebe wanted the children, when small, to be able to watch favourite programs, still be within talking range, so TV is in this room.

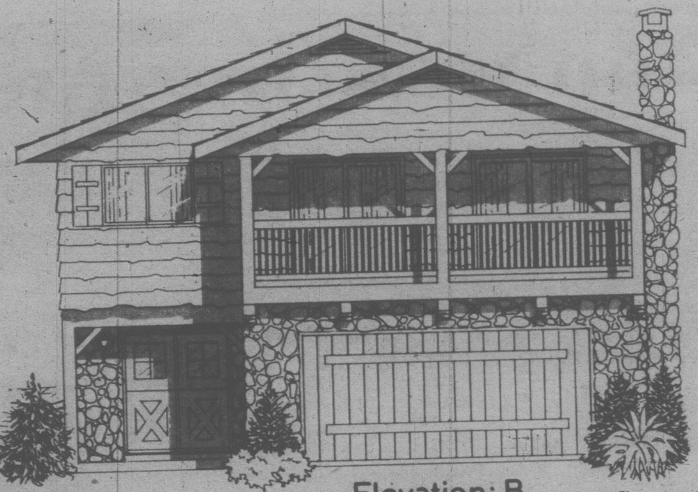
EXPERTS HAVE SAID that the reason the split leaf philadendron does so well is because, while the leaves get afternoon sun from the west-facing windows, the roots, planted as they are in stone and slate, remain cool.



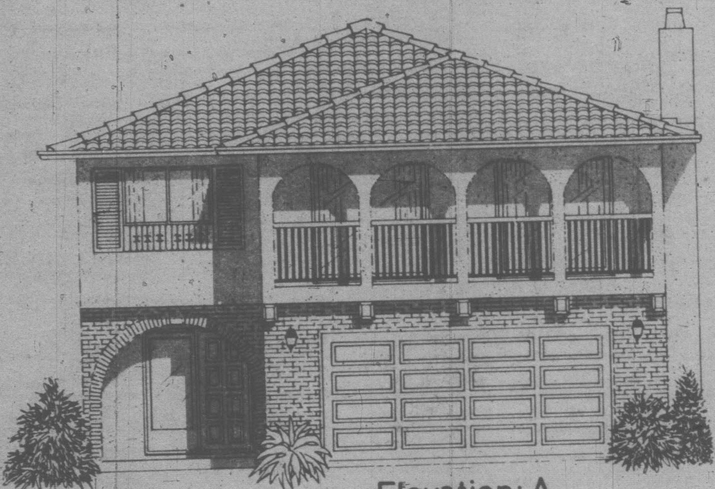
CURTAINED ALCOVE in the basement recreation area. Crisp black and white furnishings are dramatically accented with red spread, brightly colored cushions. This space becomes small bedroom when curtains are drawn.

PLAN OF THE WEEK

Choice of two exterior looks: same floor plan



Elevation: B



Elevation: A

Plan Number: 78-1375

Here's an outstanding basement-on-grade home design which provides abundant living room for the growing family at present, and great flexibility for future development.

The exterior may be finished in either traditional North American rustic style — with stone veneer and chimney, horizontal channel siding and shake or shingle roof — or, in the visually exciting Mediterranean mood — with brick veneer, white stucco siding and chimney, and Spanish tile roof.

The weather-sheltered entry leads up six risers to a compact reception foyer and storage closet, from whence naturally left to the large, L-shape living-dining room combination.

The living room features a centrally-positioned cantilevered hearth masonry fireplace for convivial evenings at home, and abundant natural lighting through wide, rear-facing windows. The dining room has access to a wide rear patio through full-width sliding glass doors.

A well-designed U-shape kitchen has an excellent work triangle and generous countertop work surfaces.

The kitchen separation from the family room may easily be constructed as a convenient snack bar counter for those who prefer. The family room provides easy access to the rear patio via sliding glass doors for outdoor barbecues in fine weather.

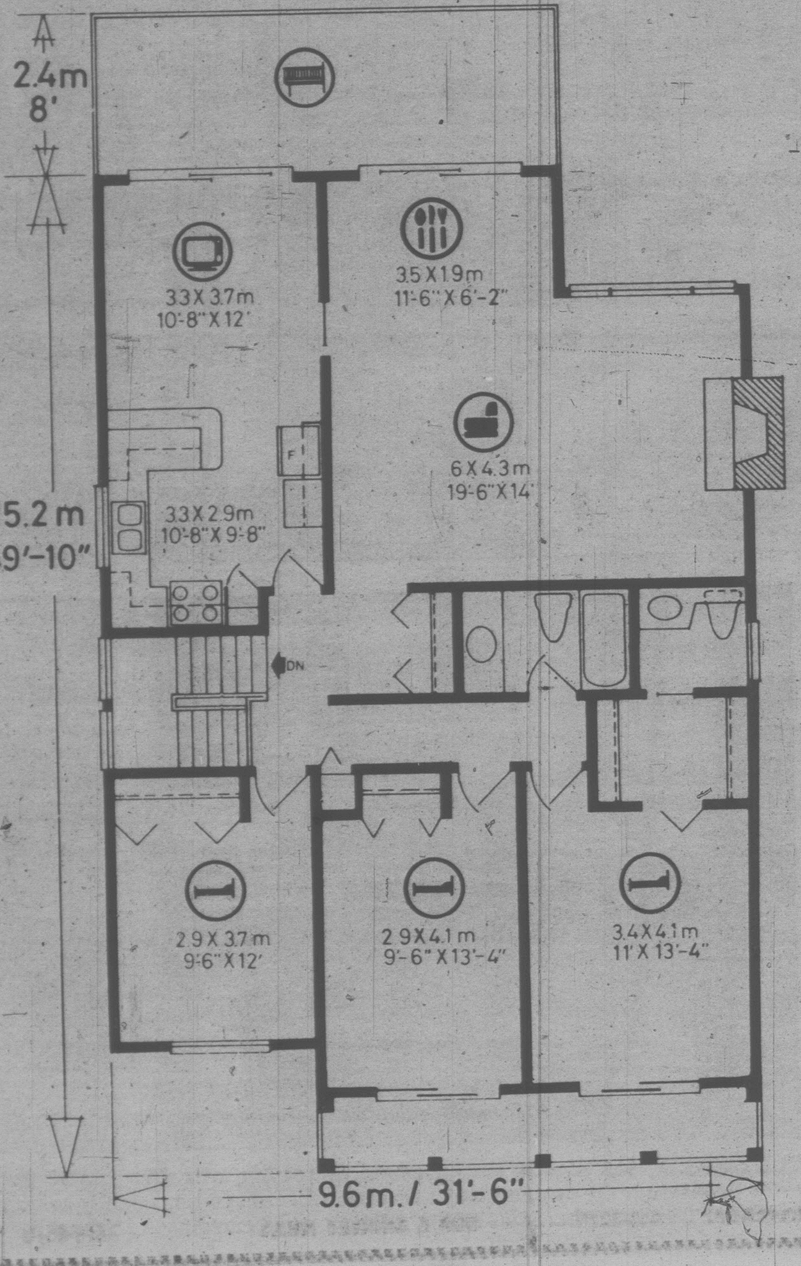
A convenient pocket door provides ready access to the dining room, yet allows for privacy when entertaining.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage area on the upper level. Each has ample closet storage and excellent exposure for natural lighting. The master bedroom has a full walk-in closet and a two-piece ensuite behind a space-saving pocket door.

The grade level offers abundant space for the future development of a family or recreation room, additional bedrooms or whatever the individual family prefers.

A roughed-in raised-hearth masonry fireplace invites a rec room or lounge, and a roughed-in three-piece bath affords additional convenience.

An enclosed two-car garage completes the convenience features of this spacious and eye-catching design.



House designed with front bedrooms is particularly suited for rear-view lot

Stop wasting fuel: Downsize furnace nozzle

By A. J. HAND

When I bought my present home some years ago, I payed about 19 cents a gallon for heating oil. This winter there is talk of that price reaching a dollar. Even worse is the possibility that there won't be enough oil to keep us warm at any price. The result is that homeowners have been roused from their complacency, and once again are looking for ways to save fuel.

One of the best spots to attack fuel waste is in your furnace. And one of the simplest ways to do so is through downsizing. I mentioned this technique a few years back, but now is a good time to bring it up again. Downsizing is simply the installation of a smaller burner nozzle in your furnace. Here's how it works.

As you probably know, your furnace is controlled by a thermostat. When the temperature in your home drops below the level set on your thermostat, the furnace switches on. It runs until your home warms up and the thermostat is "satisfied." Then it shuts off.

But every time the furnace shuts off, a certain amount of heat is wasted. And the longer the furnace remains off, the more heat heat it wastes. Ideally, a furnace should run constantly, eliminating those fuel-wasting off periods. But that's impossible. A furnace that runs constantly might keep the house just right on a 20-degree day, but it would overheat you if the temperature outside hit 40, and give you the shivers if the temperature outside dropped to zero.

The best you can do is size your furnace to turn constantly on the coldest day you expect to experience. But most furnaces are oversized when installed (just to make sure they can do the job, and to provide extra capacity in case the house is enlarged). And the problem can be aggravated if you add insulation, caulking and weatherstripping, or storm windows. All these steps have the effect of making your furnace too large.

Downsizing is the solution. If your furnace runs intermittently, even on the coldest day of winter, it is too large. Ask your serviceman to check and see if he can install a smaller burner nozzle. The smaller nozzle will burn less fuel per hour and in effect make your furnace burn longer. Thus you move closer to the ideal of constant operation.

But downsizing has its limitations. You can only reduce nozzle size so far. Then performance may actually begin to suffer, and you could even damage the furnace. If downsizing won't work for you, possibly a whole new burner gun will.

Insulating basement, repairing vapor barrier, painting gyproc

Q. I want to insulate my basement to R-24 with fiberglass. Can I install one row of R-12 fiberglass horizontally behind my 2x3 framing and then install R-12 batts vertically between the 2x3 framing?

A. Yes you can. It is best to build the 2x3 framing and put it in position first making sure that you leave enough space behind the 2x3's for the thickness of the horizontal R-12 and also the thickness of the vertical R-12 fiberglass insulation. Then simply lay the horizontal batts in behind the 2x3 studs making sure there are no voids or gaps. The insulation should go right from the ceiling to the floor. Then install the fiberglass insulation between the 2x3 studs, install a vapour barrier and then your wall finish. This system is really superior to installing R-24 between the studs only since the area where the stud is, is not insulated well. The R-12 behind the stud members will help to insulate that section of the wall. The stud thickness makes up about 10 per cent of the wall area.

Q. We installed studding and insulation in our basement and vapour barrier last year and now we wanted to finish our basement into a rec room. In the meantime the kids have poked some holes in the vapour barrier and we wonder if we should replace the entire vapour barrier or can we simply patch the holes and if so how?

A. Yes you can patch the holes with no problem. Take a piece of vapour barrier large enough to cover the area that is damaged and to reach from stud to stud. Then the vapour barrier could be stapled on to the studs but the edge of the patching vapour barrier should be sealed to the existing vapour barrier with some type of tape. Either heating tape or a good quality fibre tape could be used. It is very important that the vapour barrier have absolutely no holes in it, as any warm air leaking into the insulation can reduce the value of the insulation and cause problems such as condensation and frost in cold areas. It may be easier, if you have a lot of holes, to install a new vapour barrier. This can be done either overtop of the existing vapour barrier or you can remove the existing vapour barrier if it were to present a problem. The important thing is to have a complete vapour barrier on the wall.

Q. We would like to install a new toilet in our bathroom and wonder if you could give us some hints to make the job easier and so that we will do it right?

A. First before you install a new toilet, check the distance that the centre of the toilet drain is roughed in from the wall. Many of the older toilets were fourteen inches from the wall, whereas most new toilets are roughed in twelve inhes from the wall. Therefore if you have roughing in fourteen inches from the wall and want to install a new toilet that is meant to be roughed in twelve inches from the wall you have to change your toilet drain or your new toilet will be two inches farther away from the wall. Changing a toilet drain can be a problem especially in older homes. This is usually a job for a professional plumber. But if it is a newer home, then making the change souldn't be difficult since the new toilet should be the same measurement as the one that you now have. The first step is to shut off the water. This is easy if you have a shut-off valve underneath the toilet. If you don't have one then it is best to install one since you have to shut off the entire water system otherwise. If you do decide to shut off the entire water system make sure that you are ready to make the complete changeover and hook up the water drain again so that you can turn the water back on to the rest of the house. If you have some problems with getting the toilet installed then you may be without water as you can't turn the water on until the toilet is hooked up unless you have a shut-off valve. Another thing that you'll need is a new grease seal before you put the toilet down. When removing the old toilet you usually simply undo the bolts that hold it to the flange. Sometimes these bolts have a cap over them and they are simply pried off. If all of this sounds too difficult then you should cal a professional plumber.

Q. We just finished installing insulation and gyprock to our entire basement area and now want to paint it. Do you have any suggestions?

A. First of all you have to tape and fill all the joints and nail heads in the gyprock with the proper material. Once this is done and has been sanded smooth with all dust removed all the taped and filled areas should be primed with a coat of primer. Then prime the entire wall surface, and finish with a good quality paint.

Dear Mr. Hutchinson:

As an active realtor in Victoria I've found the secret of success is exposing the properties I have for sale to the greatest number of prospective purchasers and salespersons.

"Homes Today" certainly helps me to obtain this objective with circulation in excess of 80,000. The direct result of this circulation enabled another salesperson to find the "right" home for her client and enabled my vendor to get the new home he wanted.

Thank again.

Yours sincerely,

Gordon Tews

Gentlemen:

As a result of the display ad in "Homes today" I was able to find the ideal home for Mr. & Mrs. Ross of Winnipeg. The Ross family were being transferred to Victoria and were sent to us through the Realty World Referral System. They had a limited time to purchase and locating the home at Polyanthus Crescent through your supplement helped me to satisfy their needs quickly.

Mr. & Mrs. Ross are pleased to be in Victoria and delighted with their new home. We thank you for helping us to make their relocation a smooth one.

Yours truly,
MacLeod & Associated
